

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, June 5, 1907.

Pursuant to the provisions of section 8 of the act of June 13, 1888, and the provisions of the act of February 14, 1903, creating the Department of Commerce and Labor, and placing under its jurisdiction, among other branches of the public service, the former Department of Labor, now the Bureau of Labor; I have the honor to transmit herewith the Twenty-first Annual Report of the Commissioner of Labor, which relates to strikes and lockouts in the United States during the years 1881 to 1905.

Respectfully,

OSCAR S. STRAUS,
Secretary.

The SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

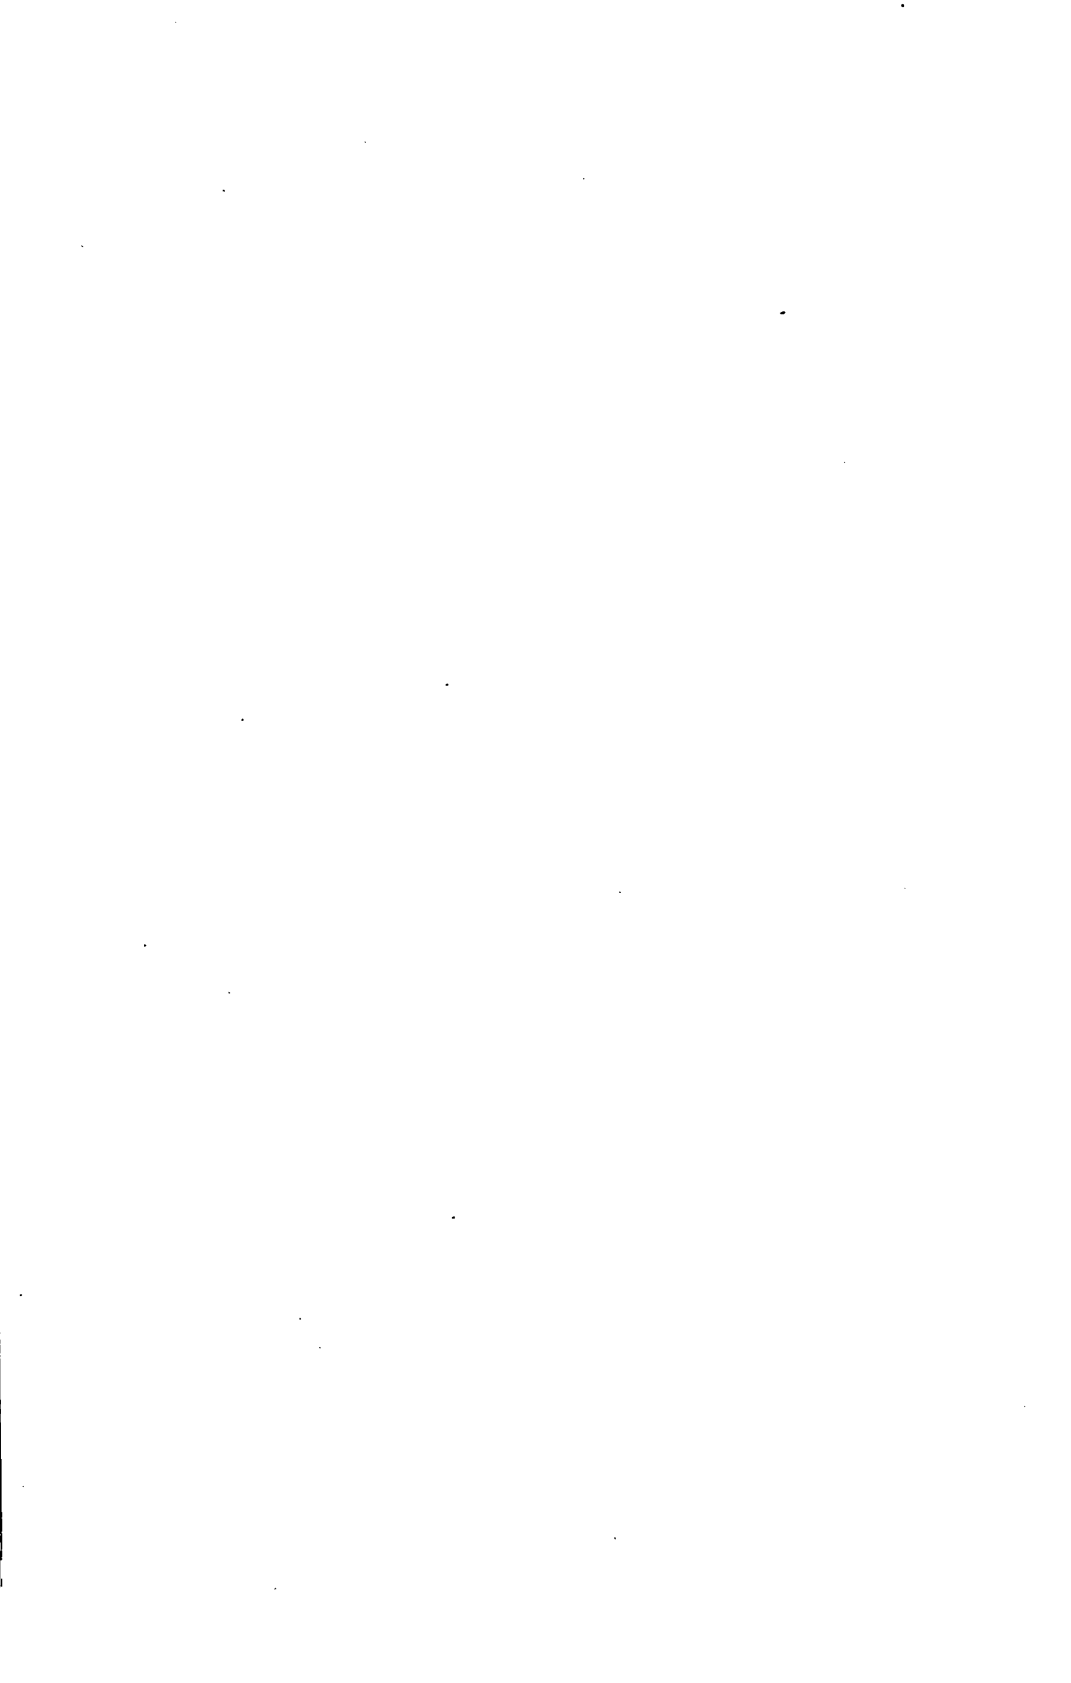

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
BUREAU OF LABOR,
Washington, June 5, 1907.

SIR: I have the honor to hand you herewith the Twenty-first Annual Report of the Commissioner of Labor, dealing with the subject of strikes and lockouts in the United States during the years 1881 to 1905.

I am, very respectfully,

CHAS. P. NEILL,
Commissioner.

To Hon. OSCAR S. STRAUS,
Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION AND DISCUSSION.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION AND DISCUSSION.

INTRODUCTION.

The present report gives the results of an investigation of strikes and lockouts in the United States for the years 1901 to 1905, inclusive, together with summaries covering the twenty-five-year period from 1881 to 1905.

The terms "strike" and "lockout" as used in this report are thus defined:

A strike is a concerted withdrawal from work by a part or all of the employees of an establishment, or several establishments, to enforce a demand on the part of employees.

A lockout is a refusal on the part of an employer or several employers to permit a part or all of the employees to continue at work, such refusal being made to enforce a demand on the part of employers.

In their industrial effects these two classes of disturbances are practically the same, and the only difference between them is that in a strike the employees take the initiative in putting a stop to work, while in a lockout the initiative is taken by the employer.

Including the present, four investigations of strikes and lockouts have been made by the United States Bureau of Labor. The titles of the several reports and the years covered by each are as follows:

PERIODS COVERED BY THE STRIKE AND LOCKOUT REPORTS OF THE BUREAU OF LABOR.

Title of report.	Period covered by the investigation.	Years.
Third Annual.....	January 1, 1881, to December 31, 1886.....	6
Tenth Annual.....	January 1, 1887, to June 30, 1894.....	7½
Sixteenth Annual.....	July 1, 1894, to December 31, 1900.....	6½
Twenty-first Annual.....	January 1, 1901, to December 31, 1905.....	5

The present report gives statistics concerning strikes and lockouts that occurred in the period from 1901 to 1905, inclusive, in as great detail as space permits. In addition, the report summarizes the statistics of strikes and lockouts for the entire period of twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905.

The record of strikes and lockouts in the years preceding 1881 is incomplete. Such information as could be obtained from newspaper and magazine files and from other publications was included in the Third Annual Report of this Bureau and repeated in the Sixteenth Annual Report, to which reports the reader is referred for the interesting though brief description of these early labor disturbances. From 1881 to 1905, however, the record of strikes and lockouts in the United States is approximately complete. It is believed that no labor disturbance of importance has escaped notice and inclusion in the reports of the Bureau.

In the general tables of this report and in the text tables drawn therefrom no strikes or lockouts are included which lasted less than a single day. These disturbances were considered of minor importance, and therefore were not fully investigated in the preceding investigations. The results of an investigation of these short strikes and lockouts covering the five years 1901 to 1905 are presented in a separate section in the text, pages 101 to 104. In conducting an investigation of this character it is extremely difficult to get any traces of these short disturbances after any considerable period of time has elapsed, and it would be equally difficult to secure any definite information concerning them, even if any traces of them could be obtained.

As strikes of less than a single day are more frequently wholly successful than longer strikes, the inclusion of these shorter strikes would increase to a small extent the percentage of successful strikes as given in the tables; but as these partial day strikes usually involve a comparatively small number of employees and small establishments, there would be very little other change of any consequence in the tables in this report if such strikes had been included.

In this period of twenty-five years there were 36,757 strikes and 1,546 lockouts in the United States, making a total of 38,303 disturbances of this character. As above indicated, disturbances of less than one day's duration are not included in these numbers.

Strikes occurred in 181,407 establishments and lockouts in 18,547 establishments, making a total of 199,954 establishments involved in these disturbances. The total number of persons who went out on strike during the twenty-five years was 6,728,048 and the number of persons locked out was 716,231, making a total of 7,444,279 persons striking and locked out.

Because of the dependence of one occupation upon another the cessation of work by strikers and employees locked out often renders it impossible for fellow-employees in the same establishment to continue work. The number of employees, including strikers, thrown out of work by strikes within this period of twenty-five years was 8,703,824, and the number thrown out of work by lockouts was 825,610, making a total of 9,529,434 persons thrown out of work by these labor disturbances in the establishments involved. In the above figures establishments and employees have been counted each time they were involved in different strikes and lockouts. On the other hand, no attempt has been made to estimate the number of persons thrown out of work in establishments not involved in the disturbances but closely dependent in many ways on the establishment involved, as in furnishing material, etc.

Of the 36,757 strikes from 1881 to 1905, 68.99 per cent were ordered by labor organizations, and 31.01 per cent were begun either by employees who were not members of organizations, or who, if members of organizations, went on strike without the sanction of their organizations. Of the 181,407 establishments involved in strikes, 90.34 per cent were included in strikes ordered by organizations. Strikes ordered by labor organizations included 79.69 per cent of all strikers and 77.45 per cent of the total persons thrown out of work in establishments involved in strikes.

The average duration of strikes per establishment was 25.4 days and of lockouts 84.6 days. The strike or lockout does not, of course, always result in the closing of the establishment affected, but in strikes 111,343, or 61.38 per cent of all establishments involved, were closed an average of 20.1 days. In lockouts 12,658, or 68.25 per cent of all establishments involved, were closed an average of 40.4 days. The days here referred to are calendar days, including Sundays and holidays.

Employees who struck succeeded more often than they failed; they succeeded in winning all the demands for which the strike was undertaken in 47.94 per cent of the establishments, succeeded partly in 15.28 per cent of the establishments, and failed to win any of their demands in 36.78 per cent of the establishments. On the other hand, employers succeeded more often than they failed when they locked out their employees. Lockouts resulted in favor of employers in 57.20 per cent of the establishments thus involved, succeeded partly in 10.71 per cent of the establishments, and failed in 32.09 per cent of the establishments.

Strikes ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful in 49.48 per cent of the establishments involved, partly successful in 15.87 per cent of the establishments, and failed in 34.65 per cent of the establishments. Strikes not ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful in 33.86 per cent of the establishments involved, partly successful in 9.83 per cent of the establishments, and failed in 56.31 per cent of the establishments.

Of the 8,703,824 employees thrown out of work by strikes, 90.57 per cent were males and 9.43 per cent were females. Of the 825,610 thrown out of work by lockouts, 84.18 per cent were males and 15.82 per cent were females.

As might naturally be expected, more strikes were occasioned by demands for increase of wages than for any other one cause. A total of 11,851 strikes, or 32.24 per cent of all strikes, were for this cause alone. This cause, in combination with other causes, produced 3,117 strikes, making 40.72 per cent of all strikes attributable in whole or in part to demands for increase of wages.

The next most fruitful cause of strikes was disagreement concerning recognition of union and union rules. This cause alone produced 18.84 per cent of all strikes, and both alone and combined with other causes produced 23.35 per cent of all strikes. Objection to reduction of wages alone and combined with other causes produced 11.90 per cent of all strikes. Demands for reduction of hours alone and combined with other causes produced 9.78 per cent of all strikes.

Of the total number of establishments involved in strikes, 57.91 per cent were involved in strikes caused either in whole or in part by demands for increase of wages.

The most important cause of lockouts was disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization, which cause, alone and combined with various causes, produced nearly one-half of all lockouts and included more than one-half of all establishments involved in lockouts.

The greatest number of strikes that occurred in any one industry was in the building trades, which embraced 26.02 per cent of all strikes and 38.53 per cent of all establishments involved in strikes. In the coal and coke industry were 9.08 per cent of all strikes and 9.39 per cent of all establishments involved in strikes. Many strikes were found in the following industries: Boots and shoes; clothing, men's; foundry and machine shop; and tobacco (cigars and cigarettes). The coal and coke industry included more strikers than any other industry, also more employees thrown out of work. The second industry in order in this respect was the building trades. In the building trades were 16.49 per cent of all lockouts, more than one-half of all the establishments involved, and about 30 per cent of all the employees locked out and of persons thrown out of work.

In 1903 there were 3,494 strikes, a greater number than in any other year. The number was 471 in 1881, the first year of the period, while in 1905 the number was 2,077. More strikers went out in the year 1902 than in any other year, and more employees were thrown out of work in 1894 than in any other year.

Lockouts were more frequent and included more employees in 1903 than in any other year of the period.

In the North Atlantic division were more than one-half of all strikes, establishments involved, strikers, and employees thrown out of work. In the North Central division were almost one-third of the totals in these items named.

The percentages of the total number of strikes in the principal industrial States were as follows: New York, 27.75 per cent; Pennsylvania, 11.31 per cent; Illinois, 9.86 per cent; Massachusetts, 7.55 per cent, and Ohio, 6.99 per cent. Of the strikers, 25.12 per cent of the total number were in Pennsylvania, 21.15 per cent in New York, 13.31 per cent in Illinois, 6.36 per cent in Ohio, and 5.25 per cent in Massachusetts. These States named were also the States in which the greatest number of lockouts occurred.

A number of interesting tables have been prepared from the general tables shown in the body of the report and are presented in this chapter. These tables, as well as the general tables, do not include strikes or lockouts of less than one day's duration. An explanation of the various terms used in the tables of this report will be found in the discussion and explanation of the general tables, page 107 et seq.

STRIKES, ESTABLISHMENTS INVOLVED, STRIKERS, AND EMPLOYEES THROWN OUT OF WORK.

A series of three tables shows the number of strikes, establishments involved, strikers, and employees thrown out of work, and also the average number of establishments involved per strike, the average number of strikers per strike, and the average number of employees thrown out of work per strike. The first table of the series shows these data by years, the second by industries, and the third by States and geographical divisions.

The table by years follows:

* Not including 2 strikes involving 33 establishments not reported.

The total number of strikes during the period from 1881 to 1905 was 36,757, the number of establishments involved 181,407, the number of strikers 6,728,048, and the number of employees thrown out of work 8,703,824.

For the 25-year period from 1881 to 1905 the average number of establishments per strike was 4.9, the average number of strikers per strike was 183, and the average number of employees thrown out of work per strike was 237.

Considering the strikes by the years in which they occurred, it is seen from the above table that the number of strikes per year varied from 443 in 1884 to 3,494 in 1903, the number of establishments involved varied from 2,105 in 1882 to 20,248 in 1903, the number of strikers from 101,070 in 1881 to 553,143 in 1902, and the number of employees thrown out of work from 129,521 in 1881 to 660,425 in 1894. The average number of establishments per strike varied from 3.5 in 1885, 1889, and 1893 to 7.9 in 1897; the number of strikers per strike from 85 in 1905 to 374 in 1894, and the number of employees thrown out of work from 107 in 1905 to 490 in 1894.

The second table of the series presents the statistics by industries:

^a Not including 2 strikes involving 33 establishments not reported.

A greater number of strikes occurred in the building trades than in any other industry. In that industry during the years from 1881 to 1905 there were 9,564 strikes, 69,899 establishments involved, 917,905 strikers, and 1,083,699 employees thrown out of work in the establishments involved in strikes. The size of the strikes in the building trades is indicated by the figures in the average columns. The average number of establishments involved in each strike was 7.3, the average number of strikers per strike 96, and the average number of employees thrown out of work per strike 113.

The coal and coke industry was second in importance so far as number of strikes and establishments involved were concerned, but first in number of strikers and employees thrown out of work. In the coal and coke industry there were 3,336 strikes, 17,025 establishments involved, 2,006,353 strikers, and 2,460,743 employees thrown out of work. The average per strike was 5.1 establishments, 601 strikers, and 738 employees thrown out of work. So far as the average number of establishments involved was concerned, the strikes in the coal and coke industry were considerably smaller than the strikes in the building trades, but both the average number of strikers and the average number of employees thrown out of work were more than six times as great in the coal and coke strikes as in the building trades strikes.

The average number of establishments involved per strike varied from 1 to 33.9. Two industries averaged 1 establishment each, and one industry (blacksmithing and horseshoeing) averaged 33.9 establishments per strike.

The average number of strikers per strike varied from 29 in the manufacture of coffins and undertakers' goods to 684 in slaughtering and meat packing.

The average number of employees thrown out of work per strike varied from 37 in the manufacture of awnings, tents, and sails to 839 in slaughtering and meat packing.

The average number of strikers and of employees thrown out of work indicate the size of a strike, but a strike of only a few men in certain occupations or industries may as successfully tie up the establishment or industry temporarily as a much larger number in other occupations or industries.

a Not including 1 strike involving 12 establishments not reported.

b Not including 1 strike involving 21 establishments not reported.

c Not including 2 strikes involving 33 establishments not reported.

The largest numbers of strikes occurred, as might be expected, in the most important industrial States of large population. The greatest number of strikes in any one State occurred in New York, the number in that State being 10,199. In Pennsylvania there were 4,159 strikes, and in Illinois 3,624.

The number of establishments involved in strike was 51,597 in New York, 29,176 in Illinois, and 24,985 in Pennsylvania.

In a consideration of strikers and employees thrown out of work, Pennsylvania occupies the first position. The number of strikers was 1,690,414 in Pennsylvania, 1,422,778 in New York, and 895,593 in Illinois. The number of employees thrown out of work was 2,242,934 in Pennsylvania, 1,674,290 in New York, and 1,207,000 in Illinois.

The average number of establishments per strike was 5.1 in New York, 6 in Pennsylvania, and 8.1 in Illinois. The average number of strikers per strike was 140 in New York, 406 in Pennsylvania, and 247 in Illinois. The average number of employees thrown out of work was 164 in New York, 539 in Pennsylvania, and 333 in Illinois. The largest number of establishments per strike was in Colorado, the average in that State being 9.7.

The presentation by geographical divisions shows that a much larger number of strikes occurred in the North Atlantic and North Central divisions than in the other divisions, which occupy less important positions industrially. The average number of establishments involved per strike was the highest in the Western division and much lower in the South Atlantic and South Central divisions than in the corresponding Northern divisions. The average number of strikers per strike was the highest in the North Atlantic and South Atlantic divisions and the lowest in the Western. The average number of employees thrown out of work per strike was the highest in the North Central division and the lowest in the Western.

In the series of three tables which follow are presented for lockouts statistics similar to those shown for strikes in the preceding series of tables.

The greatest number of lockouts occurred in the building trades. In that industry were 255 lockouts, involving 10,142 establishments, locking out 221,064 employees and throwing out of work 245,762 employees.

The manufacture of cigars and cigarettes occupies second place so far as number of lockouts is concerned, but the second place is occupied by the manufacture of men's clothing so far as establishments involved are concerned, and by the coal and coke industry so far as employees locked out and employees thrown out of work are concerned.

The average number of establishments per lockout varied from 1 to 123.2; the average number of employees locked out from 10 to 2,000, and the average number of employees thrown out of work from 10 to 6,341.

The greatest number of lockouts within any one State occurred in New York; in that State were 326 lockouts, 6,422 establishments involved, 222,853 employees locked out, and 269,415 employees thrown out of work. In Pennsylvania were 164 lockouts, 2,276 establishments involved, 70,543 employees locked out, and 84,374 employees thrown out of work. In Illinois were 141 lockouts, 4,555 establishments involved, 188,849 employees locked out, and 218,285 employees thrown out of work.

A large proportion of the lockouts occurred in the North Atlantic and North Central divisions; in those divisions the average number of establishments per lockout, the average number of employees locked out, and the average number of employees thrown out of work were all greater than in the Southern and Western divisions.

PER CENT OF STRIKES, ESTABLISHMENTS INVOLVED, STRIKERS, AND EMPLOYEES THROWN OUT OF WORK, BY INDUSTRIES AND BY STATES.

The two text tables here given show the number of strikes, establishments involved, strikers, and employees thrown out of work, grouped by industries, and by States and geographical divisions for the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905, inclusive. In addition to showing the actual numbers for each industry and each State and geographical division, the tables show also the per cent of the total in each industry and the per cent in each State and geographical division.

The following table show these data by industries:

By far a larger per cent of strikes occurred in the building trades than in any other industry. Expressed in percentages 26.02 per cent of the strikes, 38.53 per cent of the establishments involved, 13.64 per cent of the strikers and 12.45 per cent of the employees thrown out of work were in the building trades. In the coal and coke industry there were only 9.08 per cent of the strikes and 9.39 per cent of the establishments involved; but there were more than twice as many strikers and employees thrown out of work as in strikes in the building trades, the percentage of strikers being 29.82 per cent and of employees thrown out of work 28.27 per cent of the total number. So far as the number of strikes is concerned the next industry in importance is the manufacture of cigars and cigarettes, while so far as establishments involved, strikers, and employees thrown out of work are concerned, the manufacture of men's clothing occupies third place.

An examination of the above table shows that during the twenty-five years a large part of the strikes occurred in a few of the principal manufacturing States of the largest population. In New York were 27.75 per cent of the strikes, 28.44 per cent of the establishments involved, 21.15 per cent of the strikers, and 19.24 per cent of the employees thrown out of work. In Pennsylvania were 11.31 per cent of the strikes, 13.77 per cent of the establishments involved, 25.12 per cent of the strikers, and 25.77 per cent of the employees thrown out of work. In Illinois were 9.86 per cent of the strikes, 16.08 per cent of the establishments involved, 13.31 per cent of the strikers, and 13.87 per cent of the employees thrown out of work. Next in importance were Massachusetts and Ohio.

In the presentation by geographical divisions it is seen that in the North Atlantic division were 55.59 per cent of the strikes, 54.02 per cent of the establishments involved, 56.38 per cent of the strikers, and 56.79 per cent of the employees thrown out of work. In the South Atlantic division were but 4.98 per cent of the strikes, in the South Central 4.92 per cent, and in the Western 4.39 per cent.

The largest number of lockouts occurred in the building trades, being 16.49 per cent of all lockouts. The second industry in importance in the number of lockouts was the manufacture of cigars and cigarettes, with 9.77 per cent, and the third in importance was printing and publishing, with 7.44 per cent. In the building trades were 54.68 per cent of all establishments involved, 30.87 per cent of all employees locked out, and 29.77 per cent of all employees thrown out of work. Second in importance, so far as establishments are concerned, was the manufacture of men's clothing, with 9.72 per cent. Second in importance to the building trades, so far as employees locked out and employees thrown out of work are concerned, was coal and coke, in which industry the employees locked out numbered 8.56 per cent of the whole, and the employees thrown out of work 8.53 per cent of the whole.

In the following table similar statistics are presented by States and geographical divisions:

* Less than 0.01 per cent.

The largest number of lockouts occurred in New York, the second largest number in Pennsylvania, and the third largest in Illinois. In New York State were 21.09 per cent of all lockouts, 34.63 per cent of all establishments involved, 31.11 per cent of all employees locked out, and 32.63 per cent of all employees thrown out of work by lockouts. In Pennsylvania were 10.60 per cent of all lockouts, 12.27 per cent of all establishments involved, 9.85 per cent of all employees locked out, and 10.22 per cent of all employees thrown out of work. In Illinois the number of lockouts was less than in Pennsylvania, being but 9.12 per cent of the whole, but the number of establishments was 24.56 per cent, the number of employees locked out 26.37 per cent, and the number of employees thrown out of work 26.44 per cent of the total.

The portion of the table presenting lockouts by geographical divisions shows that 49.94 per cent of the lockouts were in the North Atlantic division; 5.95 per cent in the South Atlantic, 32.08 per cent in the North Central, 5.63 per cent in the South Central, and 6.40 per cent in the Western.

STRIKES ORDERED BY LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

The tables which follow show the proportion of strikes ordered by labor organizations and not so ordered, and also compare the results of the two classes of strikes. In these tables all strikes, lasting one day or more, which occurred during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905 have been tabulated in two classes, so that this comparison can easily be made. The strikes that are tabulated as not having been ordered by labor organizations are not necessarily strikes begun and carried on by employees who were not members of an organization. They include not only this class of strikes, but also strikes carried on by members of organizations, when these strikes were without the authority of such organizations. It would have been desirable, but it was not practicable, to secure sufficiently definite information to separate these last two classes of strikes; therefore, they have been combined under the single head of "Strikes not Ordered by Labor Organizations."

An examination of these tables shows that 68.99 per cent of all strikes during the twenty-five-year period, 1881 to 1905, were ordered by labor organizations and 90.34 per cent of all establishments involved in strikes were included in strikes ordered by labor organizations. Of the strikes ordered by labor organizations the employees were successful in 49.48 per cent, partly successful in 15.87 per cent, and failed in 34.65 per cent of the establishments involved, while in strikes not ordered by labor organizations the employees were successful in 33.86 per cent of all establishments involved, partly successful in 9.83 per cent, and failed in 56.31 per cent. Of all strikers

79.69 per cent were in strikes ordered by labor organizations, and of all employees thrown out of work 77.45 per cent were in establishments involved in strikes ordered by labor organizations.

The first series of three tables shows the number of strikes and of establishments involved in strikes ordered by labor organizations and the number and per cent of strikes and of establishments involved in strikes not ordered by labor organizations. The first table presents these facts by years, the second by industries, and the third by States and geographical divisions.

The table by years follows:

The percentage of strikes ordered by labor organizations within each State varied from 34.62 per cent in North Dakota to 100 per cent in Nevada. In the latter State, however, there were but 4 strikes during the period. The percentages of strikes ordered by labor organizations in some of the principal industrial States were as follows: New York 83.82 per cent, Pennsylvania 51.78 per cent, Illinois 77.54 per cent, Ohio 62.30 per cent, and Massachusetts 60.78 per cent.

The percentage of establishments involved in strikes ordered by labor organizations varied from 50 per cent in North Dakota to 100 per cent in Nevada. The percentages in some of the principal industrial States were: New York 94.86 per cent, Pennsylvania 86.19 per cent, Illinois 95.02 per cent, Ohio 86.23 per cent, and Massachusetts 87.10 per cent.

In the North Atlantic division 69.07 per cent of the strikes were ordered by labor organizations, in the South Atlantic 61.67 per cent, in the North Central 69.83 per cent, in the South Central 68.20 per cent, and in the Western 71.46 per cent. In the North Atlantic division 90.58 per cent of the establishments involved were in strikes ordered by labor organizations, in the South Atlantic 80.08 per cent, in the North Central 90.86 per cent, in the South Central 88.51 per cent, and in the Western 93.22 per cent.

The series of three tables which follows shows by years, industries, and States and geographical divisions the percentage of establishments in which strikes ordered by labor organizations succeeded, succeeded partly, and failed, and the percentage of establishments in which strikes not ordered by labor organizations succeeded, succeeded partly, and failed.

The first table of the series shows these percentages by years:

During the twenty-five year period, 1881 to 1905, the percentage of establishments in which strikes ordered by labor organizations were successful either wholly or in part was greatest in 1899, when the striking employees were reported as wholly successful in 76.33 per cent and as having gained a part of their demands in 14.19 per cent of the establishments in which strikes occurred; in the same year, the percentage of establishments in which strikes not ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful was 36.56 per cent, while they were partly successful in 14.92 per cent.

The percentage of establishments in which strikes ordered by labor organizations were successful either wholly or in part was smallest in 1891, when the strikers were wholly successful in 38.46 per cent and gained a part of their demands in 8.10 per cent of the establishments in which they struck; in the same year, the percentage of establishments in which strikes not ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful was 36.76 per cent and in addition a part of the demands were gained in 11.68 per cent.

The percentage of establishments in which strikes succeeded either wholly or in part was greater in strikes ordered by labor organizations than in strikes not so ordered, except in two years, 1891 and 1894.

The table presenting the results by industries follows:

In 49 of the 82 industries the percentage of establishments in which the strike was wholly successful was greater where the strike was ordered by labor organizations than where not so ordered. If those strikes in which the strikers succeeded in winning a part of their demands be also considered, it will be seen that in all but 20 of the 82 industries the per cent of establishments in which strikes succeeded either wholly or in part was greater for the strikes ordered by labor organizations than for those not so ordered.

In strikes ordered by labor organizations the percentage of establishments which succeeded in building trades was 52.50 per cent, with 17.59 per cent partly successful; in men's clothing 76.23 per cent successful and 6.49 partly successful; in coal and coke 20.35 per cent successful and 32.11 partly successful; in cotton goods 13.86 per cent successful and 17.82 partly successful; and in foundries and machine shops 39.02 per cent successful and 17.26 partly successful. Of strikes not ordered by labor organizations the percentage of establishments in which the strike was successful in building trades was 50.95 per cent, with 9.01 per cent partly successful; in men's clothing 23.04 per cent successful and 6.45 per cent partly successful; in coal and coke 32.59 per cent successful and 11.04 per cent partly successful; in cotton goods 21.06 per cent successful and 8.16 partly successful; and in foundries and machine shops 27.69 per cent successful and 10.58 partly successful.

Of the strikes ordered by labor organizations, the strikes were wholly successful in 65.99 per cent of the establishments in which strikes occurred and partly successful in 10.37 per cent in New York; in Pennsylvania, wholly successful in 38.28 per cent and partly successful in 25.38 per cent; in Illinois, wholly successful in 53.08 per cent and partly successful in 11.89 per cent; in Ohio, wholly successful in 33.33 per cent and partly successful in 26.13 per cent; and in Massachusetts, wholly successful in 39.24 per cent and partly successful in 16.11 per cent.

The strikes not ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful in 41.47 per cent of the establishments and partly successful in 9.36 per cent in New York; in Pennsylvania, wholly successful in 30.23 per cent and partly successful in 10.79 per cent; in Illinois, wholly successful in 42.63 per cent and partly successful in 9.09 per cent; in Ohio, wholly successful in 31.03 per cent and partly successful in 10.82 per cent; and in Massachusetts, wholly successful in 30.00 per cent and partly successful in 9.61.

The presentation by geographical divisions shows that in the North Atlantic division the ordered strikes were wholly successful in 54.72 per cent of the establishments involved and partly successful in 15.80 per cent; in the South Atlantic, wholly successful in 34.46 per cent and partly successful in 23.19 per cent; in the North Central, wholly successful in 45.94 per cent and partly successful in 16.31 per cent; in the South Central, wholly successful in 29.15 per cent and partly successful in 12.67 per cent; and in the Western division, wholly successful in 42.01 per cent and partly successful in 11.71.

The strikes not ordered were wholly successful in the North Atlantic division in 32.84 per cent of the establishments involved and partly successful in 9.75 per cent; in the South Atlantic, wholly successful in 46.34 per cent and partly successful in 9.52 per cent; in the North Central, wholly successful in 34.25 per cent and partly successful in 9.50 per cent; in the South Central, wholly successful in 22.89 per cent and partly successful in 11.14 per cent; and in the Western division, wholly successful in 33.44 per cent and partly successful in 12.80 per cent. The percentage of wholly successful strikes was considerably greater in strikes ordered by labor organizations than in those not so ordered in each of the geographical divisions except the South Atlantic; the percentage of partly successful strikes was also greater in the strikes ordered by labor organizations, except in the Western division.

The three tables which follow present the number and per cent of strikers and employees thrown out of work in establishments involved in strikes ordered by labor organizations and not so ordered. The first of the three tables present these data by years, the second by industries, and the third by States and geographical divisions.

^a Not including 33 establishments not reported.

The percentage of strikers in strikes ordered by labor organizations varied from 60.91 per cent in 1881 to 91.90 per cent in 1904. The percentage of employees thrown out of work in establishments involved in strikes ordered by labor organizations varied from 56.17 per cent in 1881 to 90.62 per cent in 1904. The years 1894 and 1900 to 1904 inclusive show very large percentages of strikers and of employees thrown out of work in strikes ordered by labor organizations, but during 1905 lower percentages are again shown.

The table by industries follows:

The presentation of strikes by years shows that the average duration per establishment for the 25 years from 1881 to 1905 was 25.4 days. During these years the average duration of strikes varied from 12.7 days in 1881 to 35.5 days in 1904. Of all establishments involved in strikes during these years 61.38 per cent were closed, and the average number of days closed per establishment was 20.1. The per cent of establishments in which strikes occurred which were closed by strikes varied from 45.54 per cent in 1905 to 85.82 per cent in 1895. The average days closed per establishment varied from 12.1 in 1881 to 36.9 in 1894.

The presentation by States shows that the average duration of strikes was 13.6 days in Utah and 175.5 days in Nevada. The percentage of establishments closed was 14.71 per cent in Oklahoma and 100 per cent in Nevada. The average days closed were 4.8 in Oklahoma and 175.5 in Nevada. Considering the States in which the largest number of strikes occurred, the average duration per establishment was 15.5 days in New York, 37.8 in Pennsylvania, and 23 in Illinois. The percentage of establishments closed was 63.29 per cent in New York, 65.82 per cent in Pennsylvania, and 68.03 per cent in Illinois. The average days closed were 11.9 in New York, 32.5 in Pennsylvania, and 19.1 in Illinois. That part of the table presenting the facts by geographical divisions shows that the average duration of strikes was greatest in the Western division and least in the North Atlantic division. The percentage of establishments closed was highest in the North Central division and lowest in the Western division. The average days closed were highest in the South Atlantic division and lowest in the Western division.

CAUSES OF STRIKES.

In the four tables which follow, certain data relating to strikes have been tabulated according to the causes for which undertaken. The classification into 14 causes is explained on pages 112 to 114. These four tables show statistics for strikes due solely to each of the 14 causes and also for strikes in which each of the 14 causes was only a partial or contributing cause. Strikes resulting from two or more causes have been counted under each of those causes combined with various causes—thus, for example, strikes for increase of wages and reduction of hours have been included in the cause “for increase of wages combined with various causes” and also in the cause “for reduction of hours combined with various causes,” as such strikes were due in part to both of these causes.

The first table shows the number and per cent of strikes due to each cause during each year from 1881 to 1905. The second table shows similar data for establishments involved in strikes, and the third table similar data for strikers. The fourth table of the series is a summary for the entire period from 1881 to 1905. This series of tables renders easy a comparison of the relative importance of each of the 14 causes considered both separately and combined with various causes during each year of the period from 1881 to 1905. The tables are presented in order, and the discussion follows the tables.

A strike due to several causes (each of which was a partial or contributing cause) has been entered under each of the causes involved, and because of this repetition no total can be made from the figures shown in this table. The totals entered in the box headings are taken from Table XI, where each strike was counted but once.]

In the first table of the series the total number of strikes in each year is shown in the box heading. Opposite each cause is shown the number of strikes arising from that cause, and the percentage which that number is of the total for the year as shown in the box heading.

In the year 1881 the predominant cause of strikes as measured by the number of strikes was for increase of wages. This cause alone produced 61.15 per cent of the 471 strikes that occurred in that year; in combination with other causes it produced 5.31 per cent of all strikes in that year. The second cause in importance was against a reduction of wages. This as a sole cause produced 10.40 per cent of all strikes in that year. Strikes concerning the recognition of union and union rules as a sole cause constituted 5.73 per cent of all strikes in that year, and alone and in combination with other causes, 6.79 per cent of all strikes in that year.

In the year 1905, the last year of the period covered by the table, a material change is seen in the relative importance of certain causes. In that year the leading cause was concerning the recognition of union and union rules. The 641 strikes for that cause alone constituted 30.86 per cent of the 2,077 strikes in that year; while alone and in combination with other causes it led to 35.53 per cent of all strikes in that year. The second cause in importance in the year 1905 was for increase of wages; 28.07 per cent of all strikes in that year were due to that cause alone, and 36.59 per cent of all strikes in that year were due to that cause alone and combined with other causes.

A comparison of the relative importance each year of some of the causes is especially interesting. The percentage of strikes for increase of wages alone was 61.15 per cent in 1881, 54.41 per cent in 1882, 45.40 per cent in 1883, 29.57 per cent in 1884, etc. The percentage fluctuated from year to year, but the general tendency was downward. The percentage of strikes against a reduction of wages solely shows a tendency to decrease. The percentage of strikes due to recognition of union and union rules alone was 5.73 per cent in 1881 and fluctuated from year to year, but generally increased until the highest point, 32.42 per cent, was reached in 1904. That cause in combination with other causes also showed a decided increase during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905.

Strikes for a reduction of hours varied in importance throughout the period; the years when they were relatively the most frequent were 1886, 1887, and 1890, while as a sole and contributing cause they were quite important in the years 1899 to 1903.

The percentage of strikes concerning the employment of certain persons, not involving union rules, did not vary materially throughout the period. Strikes because of employees working out of regular occupation were of rare occurrence in the earlier years of the period, but became something of a factor in the later years.

The difference in the percentage of sympathetic strikes is very noticeable. In 1891, 11.53 per cent of all strikes were sympathetic, and for a few years before and after 1891 they frequently occurred. Between 1895 and 1898 there were few for this cause. In 1904, however, they constituted 3.68 per cent of all strikes in the year.

The second table of the series shows the number and per cent of establishments involved in strikes due wholly or in part to each of the fourteen causes during each year from 1881 to 1905. When measured by the number of establishments involved, the most important cause of strikes was for increase of wages. In every year except four a greater number was due to that cause than to any other. The percentage of strikes due to that cause varied from 21.06 per cent in 1892 to 76.86 per cent in 1882, varying decidedly from year to year but showing a general downward tendency during the period. A comparison of strikes undertaken for increase of wages combined with various causes showed a decided tendency to increase during the twenty-five years covered by the investigation. The strikes against a reduction of wages when measured by establishments involved showed a tendency to decrease. The per cent of establishments involved, due to disputes concerning the recognition of union and union rules, increased materially during the period covered.

The third table of the series shows the number and per cent of strikers in strikes due wholly or partly to each of the 14 causes and their combinations in each of the years from 1881 to 1905.

So far as the number of strikers was concerned the most important cause of strike was for increase of wages. The percentage of strikers in strikes due wholly to that cause was 63.58 per cent in 1881, 64.26 per cent in 1882, 43.26 per cent in 1883, etc. The per cent varied materially from year to year, but generally tended to decrease during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905.

The percentage of strikers in strikes due to a demand for increase of wages, combined with other causes, increased materially during the period covered by the investigation. The percentage of strikers in strikes due wholly to disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules was 2.60 per cent in 1881, the first year of the period covered in the investigation, and 17.15 per cent in 1905. The per cent varied materially from year to year yet showed a decided increase during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905. The percentage of strikers in strikes due to disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules combined with other causes also showed a decided increase during the period covered by the investigation.

The fourth table of the series is a summary of the period from 1881 to 1905.

A study of that table shows that during the twenty-five years more strikes were undertaken for increase of wages than for any other cause. This alone led to 11,851 strikes, or 32.24 per cent of all strikes, while combined with other causes it led to 3,117 strikes, making 14,968 strikes, or 40.72 per cent of all strikes, attributable in whole or in part to demands for increase of wages.

Disputes concerning the recognition of union and union rules produced 6,926 strikes, or 18.84 per cent of all strikes, while that cause combined with other causes produced 1,658 strikes, making a total of 8,584 strikes, or 23.35 per cent of all strikes, due in whole or in part to disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules.

Nearly three times as many strikes were caused by demands for increase of wages as were caused by reduction of wages on the part of the employer. Strikes against increase of hours were few in number as compared with strikes for reduction of hours. Sympathetic strikes numbered less than 4 per cent of all strikes. The question of working conditions and rules, not involving unionism, entered into a little more than 3 per cent of all strikes.

One-third of all establishments involved in strikes were involved in strikes solely for increase of wages, and if strikes for increase of wages in combination with other causes be included, nearly 58 per cent of all establishments were involved in strikes due wholly or in part to demands for increase of wages. Measured by establishments involved, demands for reduction of hours alone and combined with other causes were second in importance among the causes, and disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules were third.

In practically one-half of all establishments involved, strikes for increase of wages succeeded, and in nearly 19 per cent of all establishments involved strikes for the same cause succeeded partly, while they failed in a little more than 31 per cent of the establishments. Strikes concerning recognition of union and union rules succeeded in 55 per cent of all establishments involved.

When the question of reduction of wages was alone at issue strikes failed more often than they succeeded. The same was true when the disputes were concerning the employment of certain persons, both alone and combined with other causes; concerning method and time of payment; concerning Saturday part holiday; concerning working conditions and rules; and in sympathetic strikes, both alone and combined with other causes.

When measured by the number of strikers and by the number of employees thrown out of work, disputes concerning wages, hours, and recognition of union and union rules were, in the order named, the most important causes of strikes.

CAUSES OF LOCKOUTS.

In the series of four tables which follows, certain data relating to lockouts have been tabulated according to the causes for which undertaken. The 14 causes and their combinations correspond to those shown for strikes in the preceding tables. The wording of the causes has been changed only so far as was necessary to make them applicable to lockouts.

The first table shows the number of lockouts due to each cause during each year from 1881 to 1905; the second table shows similar data for establishments involved in lockouts; and the third table similar data for employees locked out. These three tables show numbers only. No percentages, as in the similar tables for strikes, were computed for the reason that owing to the comparatively small number of lockouts no particular difficulty will be found in comparing the figures without percentages.

The fourth table of the series is a summary of lockouts for the period from 1881 to 1905 and shows both numbers and percentages.

The tables follow:

^d Less than 0.01 per cent.

The first table of the series shows that a much greater number of lockouts arose from disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization than from any other one cause. A greater number of lockouts were undertaken for that cause than for any other in eighteen of the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905, and not only was the actual number generally increasing during those years but the proportion of lockouts from this cause was also increasing.

The second cause in importance, so far as number of lockouts was concerned, was to enforce reduction of wages. A greater number of lockouts were undertaken for that cause than for any other one in five of the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905. That cause appears to be of decreasing importance when measured by the number of lockouts.

Considering the number of establishments involved, as shown in the second table of the series, the largest number was due to lockouts from disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization. A greater number of establishments were involved in lockouts due to that cause than to any other one cause in sixteen of the twenty-five years included in this report.

Another important cause when considered in connection with the number of establishments involved was in sympathy with lockout and against strike, elsewhere.

The third table, relating to the employees locked out, shows that in thirteen of the twenty-five years included in the report the largest number of employees were locked out by reason of disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization. Comparatively large numbers of employees were locked out by reason of lockouts to enforce reduction of wages, and against demand for increase of wages, also by reason of sympathetic lockouts.

The cause of the greatest number of lockouts, as shown in the fourth table of the series, which is a summary of the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905, was disputes concerning the recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization. This cause alone accounted for 669 lockouts, or 43.27 per cent of the total of 1,546 lockouts that occurred in the twenty-five-year period from 1881 to 1905. Alone and combined with other causes it accounted for 47.80 per cent of all lockouts. The lockouts to enforce reduction of wages numbered 199 and those against demands for increase of wages 185.

Practically one-half of all establishments involved in lockouts were so involved because of disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization either as a whole or partial cause. Lockouts for this cause succeeded in 70.72 per cent of the establishments involved and partly succeeded in 4.26 per cent of the establishments. Where this cause was combined with other causes, however, lockouts were failures in about two-thirds of the establishments involved.

Lockouts against demand for increase of wages, both alone and combined with various causes, succeeded in whole or in part more often than they failed. Sympathetic lockouts were successful in nearly three-fourths of the establishments involved. Lockouts because of disputes concerning the employment of certain persons were even more generally successful.

About one-third of all employees locked out and of all employees thrown out of work were included in lockouts due to disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization.

Lockouts due to disputes concerning wages were next in importance when measured by the number of employees locked out or thrown out of work.

RESULTS OF STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS.

The following tables present the results of both strikes and lockouts, the first of the three tables presenting these data by years, the second by industries, and the third by States and geographical divisions.

A strike in an establishment was reported as successful, when the employees succeeded in enforcing full compliance with all of their demands; partly successful, when they succeeded in enforcing compliance with a part of their demands or partial compliance with some or all of their demands; and failed, when they did not succeed in enforcing even partial compliance with any of their demands.

A lockout in an establishment was reported as successful, when the employer succeeded in enforcing full compliance with all of his demands; partly successful, when he succeeded in enforcing compliance with a part of his demands or partial compliance with some or all of his demands; and failed, when he did not succeed in enforcing even partial compliance with any of his demands.

During the twenty-five-year period from 1881 to 1905 the employees won their demands in 47.94 per cent of the 181,407 establishments involved in strikes; they won their demands in part in 15.28 per cent of the establishments, and they failed entirely in 36.78 per cent. In 57.20 per cent of the 18,547 establishments involved in lockouts the employers succeeded in forcing compliance with their demands; in 10.71 per cent there was partial compliance, and in 32.09 per cent of the establishments the employers failed.

The percentage of establishments involved in strikes in which the employees were either wholly or partly successful varied greatly from year to year, reaching as high as 73.24 per cent successful and 14.25 per cent partly successful in 1899 and falling as low as 34.51 per cent successful and 18.85 per cent partly successful in 1886, and 37.88 per cent successful and 8.29 per cent partly successful in 1891. In 1905, the last year of the investigation, the employees succeeded in enforcing their demands in 40.17 per cent of the establishments involved in strikes, succeeded partly in 11.45 per cent, and failed in 48.38 per cent. In 1905 the employers succeeded in enforcing their demands in 31.60 per cent of the establishments involved in lockouts, succeeded partly in 32.64 per cent, and failed in 35.76 per cent.

In some of the important industries most affected by labor disturbances the results were as follows: In the strikes in the building trades the employees succeeded in enforcing their demands in 52.47 per cent of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 17.42 per cent, and failed in 30.11 per cent. In coal and coke the employees succeeded in 22.52 per cent of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 28 per cent, and failed in 49.48 per cent. In the manufacture of men's clothing the employees succeeded in 75.51 per cent of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 6.49 per cent, and failed in 18 per cent.

In lockouts in the building trades the result was favorable to the employers in 66.23 per cent of the establishments involved, partially so in 4.47 per cent, and against them in 29.30 per cent. In coal and coke the employers succeeded in 10.26 per cent of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 85.37 per cent, and failed in 4.37 per cent. In men's clothing the employers succeeded in 9.60 per cent of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 10.49 per cent, and failed in 79.91 per cent. In New York the employees succeeded in enforcing their demands in 64.73 per cent of the establishments involved in strikes, succeeded partly in 10.32 per cent, and failed in 24.95 per cent. The employers succeeded in enforcing their demands in 49.80 per cent of the establishments involved in lockouts, succeeded partly in 10.95 per cent, and failed in 39.25 per cent. In Pennsylvania the employees succeeded in 37.03 per cent of the establishments involved in strikes, succeeded partly in 23.27 per cent, and failed in 39.70 per cent. The employers succeeded in 83.29 per cent of the establishments involved in lockouts, succeeded partly in 0.31 per cent, and failed in 16.40 per cent. In Illinois the employees were successful in 52.56 per cent of the establishments involved in strikes, partly successful in 11.75 per cent, and failed in 35.69 per cent. The employers were successful in 53.82 per cent of the establishments involved in lockouts, partly successful in 15.26 per cent, and failed in 30.92 per cent.

In the second part of the table, relating to geographical divisions, it is seen that the employees were successful in the largest percentage of establishments involved in strikes in the North Atlantic division and failed in the largest percentage in the South Central division, while in lockouts the employers were successful in the largest percentage of establishments in the South Central division and failed in the largest percentage in the South Atlantic division.

SETTLEMENT BY JOINT AGREEMENT AND BY ARBITRATION.

In recent years there has been an increasing disposition on the part of employers to unite in associations or organizations to promote their mutual interests, so that a labor organization in entering a strike or lockout often has to meet the opposition not only of the individual employer but of an entire association of employers. Where such an association of employers exists strikes and lockouts are sometimes settled by the joint agreement of officials of the organizations on both sides rather than by the action of the employers and employees directly involved.

Another form of settlement of strikes and lockouts sometimes resorted to is that of arbitration, wherein the parties submit their dispute to the decision of a disinterested third party. The facts relating to these two methods of settling strikes and lockouts were secured in the present investigation for the years 1901 to 1905.

These facts are set forth in Tables I, II, XIII, and XIV, and are here summarized in a series of three tables.

The first table shows by years the number of strikes and lockouts which occurred in the United States during the years 1901 to 1905, the number settled by joint agreement, and the number settled by arbitration:

NUMBER OF STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS SETTLED BY JOINT AGREEMENT AND BY ARBITRATION, BY YEARS, 1901 TO 1905.

	Number.	Number settled by joint agreement.	Number settled by arbitration.	Number.	Number settled by joint agreement.	Number settled by arbitration.

1905.....	2,077	74	27	109	10	3
Total.....	13,964	803	223	541	66	11

Of the 13,964 strikes which occurred during the years 1901 to 1905, a total of 803 strikes, or 5.75 per cent of all strikes, were settled by joint agreement between organizations on both sides, and a total of 223 strikes, or 1.60 per cent of the entire number, were settled by arbitration.

Of the 541 lockouts in the five-year period, 66, or 12.20 per cent, were settled by joint agreement between organizations on both sides, and 11, or 2.03 per cent, were settled by arbitration.

Computing percentages from the figures of the table, it is seen that the percentage of strikes settled by joint agreement was 5.10 per cent in 1901, 6.45 per cent in 1902, 7.04 per cent in 1903, 5.64 per cent in 1904, and 3.56 per cent in 1905. The percentage of lockouts settled by joint agreement was 11.36 per cent in 1901, 14.10 per cent in 1902, 11.69 per cent in 1903, 15.18 per cent in 1904, and 9.17 per cent in 1905.

The second table of this series shows by industries the number of strikes and lockouts that occurred in the United States during the years 1901 to 1905, the number settled by joint agreement, and the number settled by arbitration:

Of the strikes settled by joint agreement, 397, or practically one-half, were in the building trades, 111 were in the coal and coke industry, 33 in freight handling and teaming, 25 in stone quarrying and cutting, 25 in tobacco (cigars and cigarettes). In several industries no strikes were thus settled.

Of the 223 strikes settled by arbitration, 58 were in the building trades, 29 in coal and coke, 11 in freight handling and teaming, and 10 in boots and shoes. In 32 of the 82 industries no strike was settled by arbitration.

The next table shows, by States and geographical divisions, the number of strikes and lockouts that occurred in the United States during the years 1901 to 1905, the number settled by joint agreement, and the number settled by arbitration.

Of the 803 strikes settled by joint agreement between organizations on both sides, 113 were in Illinois, 106 in New York, 87 in Indiana, 84 in Ohio, 74 in Pennsylvania, 62 in New Jersey, and 51 in Massachusetts. The percentage of all strikes thus settled in each of these States was as follows: Illinois, 11.48 per cent; New York, 2.83 per cent; Indiana, 15.16 per cent; Ohio, 8.41 per cent; Pennsylvania, 5.64 per cent; New Jersey, 8.83 per cent; and Massachusetts, 4.77 per cent. Of the 223 strikes settled by arbitration, 41 were in Massachusetts, 30 in Indiana, 26 in Illinois, 13 in Ohio, and 12 each in New York and Pennsylvania.

Eleven lockouts were settled by joint agreement in New York and in New Jersey, 6 in Pennsylvania, and 5 in Indiana and in Michigan. Three lockouts were settled by arbitration in New York, 2 in Massachusetts and in Illinois, and 1 each in Connecticut, Indiana, Michigan; and Ohio.

SEX OF STRIKERS.

The following tables show, by sex, the number of persons employed immediately preceding strikes in establishments involved in strikes, and also the number and per cent of employees striking. The three tables which relate to strikes and the three which follow, relating to lockouts, cover the years from 1887 to 1905 only, for the reason that the first investigation of strikes and lockouts conducted by the Bureau, covering the years from 1881 to 1886, did not include an inquiry as to the sex of strikers or employees locked out. Data for strikes are tabulated under years in the first table, under industries in the second, and under States and geographical divisions in the third.

The table by years follows:

Considering all strikes in the United States during the nineteen-year period from 1887 to 1905, the above table shows that of the 11,782,692 male employees in the establishments involved immediately preceding strikes, 44.91 per cent struck, while of the 1,452,247 female employees before the strike but 28.15 per cent struck. In 1905, the last year covered by the investigation, 35.60 per cent of the male employees and 12.24 per cent of the female employees in establishments involved struck. In every one of the nineteen years included in the table the percentage of male employees striking was greater than that of female employees striking, except in 1904, when 43.03 per cent of the males and 43.44 per cent of the females struck.

The table presenting these data by industries follows:

In the industries in which large numbers of employees of both sexes are found the table shows that in a majority of industries a larger per cent of the males than of the females in the establishments involved went on strike. In the manufacture of men's clothing 81.64 per cent of the male employees and 43.06 per cent of the female employees struck. In the manufacture of women's clothing 86.94 per cent of the male employees and 62.11 per cent of the female employees struck. In cotton goods 29.72 per cent of the male employees and 27.59 per cent of the female employees struck. In the manufacture of cigars and cigarettes 73 per cent of the male employees and 45.42 per cent of the female employees struck. In hosiery and knit goods 13.21 per cent of the male employees and 15.29 per cent of the female employees struck. The presentation of these data by States and geographical divisions follows:

In the States where the largest number of labor disturbances occurred the percentage of male employees striking was greater than that of the female employees. In New York 52.47 per cent of the males employed in establishments involved and 40.01 per cent of the females struck; in Pennsylvania, 53.33 per cent of the males and 25.96 per cent of the females; in Illinois, 31.26 per cent of the males and 21.77 per cent of the females.

The portion of the table by geographical divisions shows that in the Western division 47.61 per cent of the males employed in establishments involved struck and 49.59 per cent of the females. In each of the other geographical divisions the percentage of males who struck was much larger than that of the females.

SEX OF EMPLOYEES LOCKED OUT.

These three tables, like the three immediately preceding, cover the years from 1887 to 1905 only. The first of the tables is a compilation by years, the second by industries, and the third by States and geographical divisions. The table for years follows:

Considering the lockouts in the United States during the nineteen-year period from 1887 to 1905, 67.98 per cent of the male employees and 55.10 per cent of the female employees in establishments involved in lockouts were locked out. In 1905, the last year of the period investigated, 72.05 per cent of the male employees in establishments involved in lockouts were locked out, while 33.55 per cent of the females were locked out. In nine out of the nineteen years presented the per cent of female employees locked out was greater than the per cent of male employees. The table showing these data for lockouts by industries follows:

In the industries in which a comparatively large number of both males and females are employed, the per cent of females locked out was in many cases equal to, or greater than, that of the males. Such industries are boots and shoes, women's clothing, hats and caps, and woolen goods. In the manufacture of men's clothing 78.15 per cent of the male employees and 42.62 per cent of the female employees in the establishments involved were locked out. The presentation by States and geographical divisions follows:

In the States where lockouts are of most frequent occurrence the percentages of male and female employees locked out are as follows: In New York, in those establishments involved in lockouts, 73.97 per cent of male employees and 40.07 per cent of female employees were locked out; in Pennsylvania, 57.57 per cent of the males and 37.72 per cent of the females; in Illinois, 69.90 per cent of the males and 68.08 per cent of the females. In the South Atlantic division, 74.02 per cent of the male employees and 79.25 per cent of the female employees in establishments involved in lockouts were locked out. In each of the other geographical divisions the per cent of males exceeded the per cent of females.

SEX OF EMPLOYEES THROWN OUT OF WORK.

In the next series of three tables the sex of the employees thrown out of work by labor disturbances in establishments in which disturbances occurred is shown for both strikes and lockouts by years, by industries, and by States and geographical divisions. These tables cover the entire twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905. The table showing these data by years follows:

Considering the totals for the twenty-five-year period from 1881 to 1905, 90.57 per cent of the employees thrown out of work by strikes were males and 9.43 per cent were females. Of the employees thrown out of work by lockouts 84.18 per cent were males and 15.82 per cent were females. In 1905, the last year covered by the investigation, 91.02 per cent of the employees thrown out of work by strikes were males and 8.98 were females, while of the employees thrown out of work by lockouts 98.72 per cent were males and 1.28 per cent were females. In the industries where the largest numbers of employees were thrown out of work by strikes most of the employees thrown out were males. But in such industries as coal and coke, building trades, iron and steel, railroad transportation, and street railway transportation very few females are employed. In 11 of the 82 industries more than half of the employees thrown out of work by strikes were females. These industries were confectionery; cotton goods; men's furnishing goods; gloves and mittens; hosiery and knit goods; laundry work; millinery goods; paper goods; rope, twine, and bagging; silk goods, and tobacco (chewing and smoking). For the percentages in each industry, both for strikes and lockouts, the reader is referred to the table. The corresponding data, by States and geographical divisions, are given in the following table.

SEX OF EMPLOYEES THROWN OUT OF WORK IN ESTABLISHMENTS IN WHICH STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS OCCURRED, BY STATES AND GEOGRAPHICAL DIVISIONS,

From this table it is seen that more strikes occurred each year except 1904 in the first half of May than in any other half month; in 1904 the same number began during the first half of May as during the first half of April. During the five years 1,656, or 11.86 per cent of all strikes, began in the first half of May. The next highest period of frequency was the first half of April, which half month was the second highest in each of the five years except in 1904 when it was equal to the first half of May. In this period, within the five years there occurred 1,342, or 9.61 per cent of all strikes. The third highest period of frequency varied in the several years, but for the entire five years it was the first half of June, there being in that period 802 strikes, or 5.74 per cent of the total number of strikes. As a rule more strikes occurred in the first half of each month than in the second half. In only one month in the five years was there an exception to this rule.

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS OF LESS THAN ONE DAY'S DURATION.

In the present investigation covering the years 1901 to 1905 data were collected for strikes and lockouts of less than one day's duration. These fractional-day strikes and lockouts are not included in any of the general tables nor in any of the text tables previously shown in this report. The principal facts that could be obtained relating to these brief labor disturbances are here presented. No disturbances are included unless there was an actual, well-defined cessation of work for the express purpose of enforcing a demand. The period of cessation of work ranged from a few minutes to several hours. It is probable that this presentation for fractional-day strikes and lock-outs is not complete, as, owing to the comparative insignificance of such disturbances, some of them may have escaped notice and the memory of the persons consulted.

Data for 641 strikes lasting less than one day were obtained for the five years from 1901 to 1905. The reports relating to the fractional-day strikes show the following facts:

Of the 641 fractional-day strikes which occurred during the years 1901 to 1905, 324, or 50.55 per cent, were in the building trades, 33, or 5.15 per cent, in telegraph and telephone construction and operation, 28, or 4.37 per cent, in freight handling and teaming, 17, or 2.65 per cent, in domestic and personal service, and 16, or 2.50 per cent, in street railway transportation. In no industry other than the 5 just enumerated were more than 14 fractional-day strikes reported for the five years from 1901 to 1905.

In the following table are presented certain facts under each of the causes for which fractional-day strikes were undertaken:

* Not involving union rules.

The above presentation by causes shows that of the 641 fractional-day strikes, 268, or 41.81 per cent, were concerning recognition of union and union rules, and that 158, or 24.65 per cent, were for increase of wages.

The fractional-day strikes were successful in an unusually large per cent of the establishments involved. Of the 790 establishments involved, the strike was successful in 551, or 69.75 per cent, and partly successful in 42, or 5.32 per cent.

For the five years, 1901 to 1905, data were reported for six lockouts lasting less than one day. The facts shown are as follows:

This report does not show the wage loss of employees, the loss of employers, or the amount of assistance given to employees in strikes and lockouts. The figures that can be obtained for these items are not entirely satisfactory, as was stated in the last preceding report on strikes and lockouts. For this reason and because of the amount of time that would be required to obtain such figures they are omitted from this report.

Figures concerning days of work lost are nearly as difficult to obtain and when obtained are also unsatisfactory; hence they are omitted.

GENERAL EXPLANATION.

The salient features of the investigation have been stated and discussed in Chapter I of this report. The present chapter is devoted to an explanation of the several tables and the terms used therein, so that they may be readily understood.

The method followed by the Bureau in conducting an investigation of strikes and lockouts has been to make a thorough examination of the leading newspapers, trade journals, labor publications, etc., published in various parts of the United States, and to take therefrom all data referring to strikes and lockouts during the period included in the particular investigation. Furnished with these preliminary data, which in most cases located the strikes and lockouts and in many cases supplied even the names of the firms involved, the agents of the Bureau were assigned districts for canvassing. In addition to the information contained in these preliminary data, the agents were instructed to make every possible effort, by personal inquiry and consultation with labor organizations, manufacturers' associations, etc., to learn of any other labor disturbances which had occurred in the districts assigned them during the period under consideration, so that all strikes and lockouts might be investigated.

The present investigation, like the three preceding investigations, covers only the continental United States. A few strikes and lockouts are known to have occurred in Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, and Porto Rico, but it was not deemed advisable to take the time and incur the expense necessary to investigate them and include them in this report.

The facts relating to each strike and lockout were collected by an agent of the Bureau at the place where the disturbance occurred, both sides to the controversy being consulted wherever possible, and the discrepancies reconciled with the greatest possible fairness. It is believed that the statements presented in the following general tables are substantially correct.

The definitions of a strike and a lockout are given in the introduction, and as there stated these two disturbances are practically the same, the only real difference being that in a strike the employees take the initiative while in a lockout the initiative is taken by the employer. This distinction has been observed in separating the various labor disturbances into strikes and lockouts for tabulation in the reports of the Bureau. Some difficulty was experienced in classifying certain disturbances, owing to the inadequate information obtainable and because of the very slight difference between a strike and a lockout, as explained above. Particular care, however, has been taken in the classification.

A "general strike" is a strike involving two or more establishments and entered into by the concerted action of employees of the several establishments. A "general lockout" is a lockout involving two or more establishments and entered into by the concerted action of employers or operators of the several establishments.

In general strikes or lockouts extending into two or more States the strike or lockout in each State has been considered a separate and distinct strike where it was possible to make a proper division of the facts under each of the States involved.

General strikes and lockouts involving two or more States, where it was impossible to make such division of the facts as would allow of their tabulation in proper proportion under each of the States involved, have been tabulated under the State most affected and cross references made to the other States involved.

In the Third Annual Report the establishment and not the strike or lockout was made the unit of the tabular presentation. In including the data of that report in the summaries of this report the data for all general strikes in the period covered by that report have been assembled so as to make the strike or lockout the unit for the entire twenty-five-year period, from 1881 to 1905.

The number of strikes ordered by labor organizations includes all strikes ordered by direct vote of a labor organization and also all ordered by a business agent or committee of such organization acting under powers conferred by the organization. Lockouts ordered by organizations are those which were ordered by some organization of the employers.

The word "establishment" as used in this report means the place or places of work operated by a person, firm, or corporation in a locality. The plants of different employers in the same locality, or of the same employer in different localities, are considered separate establishments.

An establishment was considered closed when its usual productive work was discontinued. Aggregate days closed represent the sum of the calendar days each of the establishments was closed. The figures indicating average days closed per establishment were found by dividing the aggregate days closed by the number of establishments closed.

Aggregate days until strikers or employees locked out were reemployed or places filled by others represent the sum of the calendar days' duration of the strike or lockout in each establishment. The average per establishment was found by dividing the aggregate by the number of establishments involved. In computing duration the day on which employees first ceased their work was regarded as the beginning of a strike or lockout. The day when the employees went back to work, or when a sufficient number of new employees had been taken on to put the establishment in practically good running order, was regarded as the end. Duration of strikes or lockouts should not be considered a measure of time lost by employees, because a few, and possibly all, employees may secure work elsewhere during the disturbance, or a temporary closing of an establishment by a strike or lockout may mean a prolongation of the working season or more regular work during the remainder of the year, and thus as many days may be worked within the year as though no strike or lockout had occurred.

In general strikes and lockouts the employees in the various establishments often did not strike on the same day and often did not return to work on the same day. In all such disturbances the aggregate days' duration for the general strike or lockout was found by adding the days' duration in the individual establishments. Under like conditions where establishments were closed the aggregate days closed were computed in the same way.

The results of strikes and lockouts are shown by establishments, for the reason that a strike or lockout involving several establishments may be successful in some of the establishments, partly successful in others, and fail in others. A strike is successful in an establishment when the employees striking accomplish that for which they struck. A lockout is successful in an establishment when the employer accomplishes that for which the lockout was undertaken. In the column "succeeded partly" are included all strikes and lockouts which met with success in a part of the demands, or with partial success in some or all demands.

"Settled by joint agreement," as shown in Tables I, II, XIII, and XIV, means that the strike or lockout was settled by an agreement made between organizations on both sides and not between the employers and employees who were actually parties to the labor disturbance.

"Settled by arbitration" means that the issue which caused the strike or lockout was referred to and settled by a disinterested third party. The arbitration may be by one person, several persons, a State bureau or official, or a tribunal appointed by a court at the request of the contending parties.

Under "employees before strike or lockout" are shown, by sex, the number of employees in the establishments involved immediately preceding the strike or lockout. All employees in the establishment are included, except in a few instances where in large industries the work of the various departments are so radically different as to partake of the nature of separate establishments. In such cases, only the number in the particular department in which the strike or lockout occurred was reported. Thus, for instance, when a strike or lockout occurred in a railroad car shop only the number of employees in the car shop was reported and not the number employed on the whole railroad system.

The number of strikers includes only those who actually joined in the demand and followed their demand by a cessation of work. Employees locked out are those against whom the demand of the employer is directed and who are refused work by reason of noncompliance with the demand.

"Employees thrown out of work by strike or lockout" include the strikers or the employees locked out, and in addition all other employees in the establishments involved who are thrown out of their employment by reason of the strike or lockout. The number thrown out of work is usually larger than the number of strikers or employees locked out. The reason is that the nature of the employment of a very few strikers or employees locked out may be such that the strike or lockout will throw out of work all or a large part of the employees in the establishment.

The number of employees after strikes or lockouts, as shown in the tables covering only the period from 1901 to 1905, is the number employed by the establishments immediately after the strike or lockout was ended.

In the Third and Tenth Annual Reports of the Bureau each covering strikes and lockouts for a period of years, the facts for each disturbance were presented in detail and then summarized. In the Sixteenth Annual Report, covering strikes and lockouts, the facts were summarized by industries no data being shown for individual disturbances because of the great amount of space that would have been required.

The classification of industries used in the Tenth and Sixteenth Annual Reports is the same as that adopted for the Third Annual Report. That classification, fairly satisfactory at the time it was made, became more and more subject to objection in later years as disturbances became more frequent in other industries and new industries developed.

An entirely new classification has been prepared for this report. All strikes and lockouts covered in preceding reports have been reclassified in accordance therewith and are included in the summaries on this report.

In making a new classification of industries the object has been to bring together in groups or classes, as nearly as practicable, those establishments and industries in which the employees and employers, respectively, have a common interest and consequently are likely to act together.

Strikes and lockouts at times occur in practically every industry in which men sustain the relation of employer and employee and, in the handling of a great mass of data, classification is necessary. Any classification of establishments and industries is subject to criticism. This criticism may be because the grouping is too comprehensive or, on the other hand, because it is too narrow. There also may be criticism because of classifying establishments in certain industries. It is believed that the classification used in this report is as satisfactory as any that can be devised. This classification comprises 82 groups of industries. Should the reader desire to make a more general classification by combining any of these groups, little difficulty will be experienced in doing so.

In the tables where the presentation is made by years all strikes and lockouts have been tabulated under the calendar year in which they began, although in many cases they were not settled within the year.

Anything that may produce a disagreement between employer and employee may be the cause of a strike or lockout; yet, while there are many differently stated causes, an examination shows that nearly all of them fall within a comparatively few leading causes or groups of causes.

Space does not permit the publication in this report of all causes in detail. For all practical purposes a study of causes can better be made when they are classified. All causes have been classified under 14 groups, 13 of them being specific and the fourteenth being a miscellaneous group. These causes or groups of causes are practically the same for both strikes and lockouts, except for the necessary change of wording.

A list of the fourteen causes or groups of causes as applied to strikes and lockouts is given below:

STRIKE CAUSES.

1. For increase of wages.
2. Against reduction of wages.
3. For reduction of hours.
4. Against increase of hours.
5. Concerning recognition of union and union rules.
6. Concerning employment of certain persons (not involving union rules).
7. Concerning employees working out of regular occupation.
8. Concerning overtime work and pay.
9. Concerning method and time of payment.
10. Concerning Saturday part holiday.
11. Concerning docking, fines, and charges.
12. Concerning working conditions and rules (not involving union rules).
13. In sympathy with strikers and employees locked out, elsewhere.
14. Other causes (not above specified).

LOCKOUT CAUSES.

1. Against demand for increase of wages.
2. To enforce reduction of wages.
3. Against demand for reduction of hours.
4. To enforce increase of hours.
5. Concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization.

6. Concerning employment of certain persons (not involving union rules).
7. Concerning employees working out of regular occupation.
8. Concerning overtime work and pay.
9. Concerning method and time of payment.
10. Concerning Saturday part holiday.
11. Concerning docking, fines, and charges.
12. Concerning working conditions and rules (not involving union rules).
13. In sympathy with lockout and against strike, elsewhere.
14. Other causes (not above specified).

A short explanation is given of each of the 14 causes under which strikes are classified. Practically the same explanation will apply to the causes of lockouts. The causes of strikes were not always so clearly stated as this list would seem to indicate, and occasionally difficulty has been experienced in classifying them.

By far the greater number of strikes included under the cause "for increase of wages" were thus literally reported, but under this cause are also included strikes for adoption of a new scale, for adoption of union scale, for a change from piece to day work, etc., in which the object of the strike really was to secure an increase of wages. The cause "against reduction of wages" is equally comprehensive.

The causes "for reduction of hours" and "against increase of hours" apply to regular hours of labor. They do not include disputes concerning overtime work or concerning Saturday part holiday. It will be observed that the causes involving wages and the causes involving hours are each divided into two classes.

Under the cause "concerning recognition of union and union rules" are classed the various causes relative to dealing with union officials and the adoption or enforcement of rules and regulations of unions governing the work of their members, one of the most frequent and important rules being against working with nonunion men.

Under the cause "concerning employment of certain persons" are included demands for or against discharge of certain employees or foremen, objections against working with negroes or foreigners, etc., in which disputes the question of union rules is not involved.

"Concerning employees working out of regular occupation" includes protests of employees against being asked to do work not belonging to their trade, against employers doing journeymen's work, etc.

Under the cause "concerning overtime work and pay" are classed disputes as to whether overtime shall be worked, whether payment shall be made therefor, concerning the amount of such payment, etc., also disputes as to work on Sundays and holidays, etc.

"Concerning method and time of payment" includes disputes about frequency of pay days, change of pay days, trading at company stores, etc.

The cause "concerning Saturday part holiday" includes disputes relating to small reductions of hours on Saturday, as well as disputes relating to a full half holiday. This cause shows what share the growing demand for a partial holiday on Saturday has in strikes and lockouts.

In the cause "concerning docking, fines, and charges" are classed disputes about docking or fines for poor work or for tardiness, disputes about charges for supplies or uniforms, disputes about being required to furnish tools or supplies, objections to compulsory doctor fees, etc.

A variety of causes are included under the general cause "concerning working conditions and rules." Among them are objections to the rule compelling employees to board with employers; objections to change in method of doing work; objections to introduction of or change in machinery; objections to the task system and objections to certain shop rules (not involving union rules); here also are included demands for better ventilation, change in hour of beginning work, etc.

The cause "in sympathy with strikers and employees locked out, elsewhere," includes all strikes in which the employees have no direct grievance of their own, but stop their work that they may directly or indirectly aid employees of other establishments who are striking or who are locked out. For example, all employees in a particular trade in a city may strike and tie up all work in that trade in an effort to force the support of their employers in bringing another employer to terms. To a great extent the strikers in a sympathetic strike are union men who are seeking to benefit members of their own or some other union. The question of unionism, however, is not directly an issue between them and their employers. This cause also includes protests against performing work for other establishments in which a strike or lockout is pending, protests against furnishing material to such establishments, etc.

The group "other causes" includes all causes not elsewhere classified. In this group are found such causes as objection to withholding a part of wages as a guaranty, objection to signing contracts, objection to change in date of yearly scale, objection to subcontracting, objections to violation of agreement; also demands for enforcement of law in certain matters, for increase in the number of employees, for payment of wages overdue, etc. This group "other causes" also includes a few strikes in which the causes were so imperfectly reported that a classification could not be made.

Table I.—Strikes for each State, by years and industries, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 120 to 423).—This table presents, by years, for each State the data for all strikes which occurred in each of the 82 industries under which all lines of work have been classified for this report. This table includes only the five years covered by the present investigation, 1901 to 1905. In addition to showing the data for each industry within each year and State, the table also shows a total of all industries for each year from 1901 to 1905 for each State, and a total for each State for the entire five-year period.

Table II.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by industries and years, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 424 to 471).—This table summarizes the facts presented in Table I. Under each of the 82 industries are presented the data concerning all strikes which occurred in the United States in each of the years from 1901 to 1905.

Table III.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by industries, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 472 to 477).—This table combines and summarizes, by industries, the facts presented in the Third, Tenth, and Sixteenth Annual Reports with those of the present investigation, so as to make a presentation for all strikes that occurred in the United States during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905. Certain facts presented in Tables I and II for the years 1901 to 1905 were not obtained for the whole twenty-five years, and therefore must be omitted from Tables III, IV, and V, covering the period from 1881 to 1905. These items are the number of strikes settled by joint agreement and by arbitration, the sex of strikers, and the number of male, female, and total employees in the establishments after the strike.

Table IV.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by years, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 478 and 479).—This table summarizes, by years, the data for all strikes in the United States from 1881 to 1905. The facts presented in the Third, Tenth, and Sixteenth Annual Reports have been combined with the facts gathered in this investigation.

Table V.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by States and geographical divisions, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 480 to 485).—This table summarizes, first by States and then by geographical divisions, the data for all strikes which occurred in the United States from 1881 to 1905. The facts presented in the Third, Tenth, and Sixteenth Annual Reports have been combined with those collected during the present investigation.

Table VI.—Summary of strikes for the United States, ordered by labor organizations and not so ordered, by industries, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 486 to 489).—In this table and in the two tables which follow all strikes which occurred in the United States during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905 have been divided into two classes—those ordered by labor organizations and those not ordered by labor organizations. Under each of these two classes are shown the number of strikes; the number of establishments in which the strike succeeded, succeeded partly, and failed, and the total number of establishments; the number of strikers; and the number of employees thrown out of work in the establishments involved in strike. This table presents figures for each of the two classes of strikes under each of the 82 industries.

Table VII.—Summary of strikes for the United States, ordered by labor organizations and not so ordered, by years, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 490 and 491).—The table summarizes, by years, the same data enumerated in the explanation of the preceding table. It shows for each year from 1881 to 1905 the statistics for strikes in the United States ordered by labor organizations and for strikes not so ordered.

Table VIII.—Summary of strikes for the United States, ordered by labor organizations and not so ordered, by States and geographical divisions, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 492 to 495).—This table summarizes, first by States and then by geographical divisions, the data named in the explanation of Table VI for all strikes in the United States ordered by labor organizations and for all not so ordered during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1905.

Table IX.—Strikes for each State, by years and causes, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 496 to 579).—This table presents, by years for each State, data for the strikes which were undertaken for each of the specified causes. This table includes only the years 1901 to 1905, the years covered by the present investigation. An explanation of the several causes named in this report is given on pages 113 and 114. This table and the other tables relating to causes show under each cause only the number of strikes; the number of establishments in which the strike succeeded, succeeded partly, and failed, and total number of establishments; the number of strikers; and the number of employees thrown out of work in the establishments involved in strike.

Table X.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by years and causes, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 580 to 613).—This table summarizes, by causes for which undertaken, all strikes which occurred in the United States during each year from 1881 to 1905. The facts presented in the several reports on strikes have been combined for the twenty-five years. This table shows only such facts as are enumerated in Table IX.

Table XI.—Summary of strikes for the United States, by causes, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 614 to 621).—This table summarizes, by causes for which undertaken, all strikes which occurred in the United States during the whole twenty-five-year period from 1881 to 1905. The facts presented in the several reports on strikes have been combined for the twenty-five-year period. This table shows only those facts enumerated in Table IX.

Table XII.—Results of strikes for each cause, by years, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 622 to 635).—This table shows, by years, the results of strikes due to each of the 14 causes enumerated on page 112, and also the results of strikes in which each of the 14 causes was a partial or contributing cause. A strike due to several causes (each of which was a partial or contributing cause) has been entered under each of the causes involved. The table shows for each year under each of the causes the number of establishments involved in strikes due to that cause, and also the number and per cent of establishments in which the strike was wholly successful, partly successful, and failed.

Tables XIII to XX relate to lockouts, and are similar in form and method of presentation to certain tables relating to strikes, which have already been described.

Table XIII.—Lockouts for each State, by years and industries, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 636 to 707).—This table is similar to Table I, relating to strikes.

Table XIV.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by industries and years, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 708 to 731).—This table is similar to Table II, relating to strikes.

*Table XV.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by industries, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 732 to 735).—*This table is similar to Table III, relating to strikes, except that in this table no data are shown indicating the number of lockouts ordered by employers' organizations and not so ordered.

*Table XVI.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by years, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 736 and 737).—*This table is similar to Table IV, relating to strikes, except that the number of lockouts ordered by employers' organizations and the number not so ordered are not shown.

*Table XVII.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by States and geographical divisions, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 738 to 741).—*This table is similar to Table V, relating to strikes, except that no data are shown indicating the number of lockouts ordered by employers' organizations and not so ordered.

*Table XVIII.—Lockouts for each State, by years and causes, 1901 to 1905 (pp. 742 to 762).—*This table is similar to Table IX, relating to strikes.

*Table XIX.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by years and causes, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 763 to 771).—*This table is similar to Table X, relating to strikes.

*Table XX.—Summary of lockouts for the United States, by causes, 1881 to 1905 (pp. 772 and 773).—*This table is similar to Table XI, relating to strikes.

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

CHAPTER IV.

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

This chapter contains statistics of strikes and lockouts in Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, and Spain, compiled from official reports of these countries. In most cases the countries mentioned issue annual reports on strikes and lockouts, but there are some which give merely brief annual summaries in their monthly bulletins, and others which compile and publish data at longer and irregular intervals. In addition to the countries mentioned, Finland, Hungary, Norway, Russia, and Switzerland have published strike and lockout statistics which were not in such form as to be conveniently used in the present compilation.

The Austrian Government has been collecting statistics of labor disputes since 1891. The reports for the years 1891 and 1892 were published by the Government,^(a) but not for general distribution. The figures for these years presented in this chapter were obtained from Volume XI of the Foreign Reports of the British Royal Commission, the original publications not being available. The report for 1893 was published in the form of a supplement to the monthly statistical bulletin in the bureau of statistics of the Austrian ministry of commerce.^(b) The report for 1894 was the first that appeared in the form of a regular annual report of the bureau of statistics of Austria,^(c) a decree of the imperial ministry of commerce dated December 7, 1893, requiring the publication annually of such statistics. In 1898 a bureau of labor statistics was created in Austria by imperial decree, and the work of collecting and publishing strike and lockout statistics was transferred to this bureau. The report for 1897,^(d) published in 1899, was the first to appear under this new régime. The reports for the years 1891 to 1897, inclusive, do not cover disputes in the mining industry, but since 1898 this industry has been included, and the report for that year contains the detailed statistics of strikes and lockouts in the mining industry for the years 1894 to 1898, and a summary of all strikes and lockouts for these years, with the statistics of mine disputes included. The strikes and lockouts in the agricultural and forestry industries are not included.

At the present time the data relating to strikes and lockouts are collected by the bureau of labor statistics under authority of the decree of February 22, 1899, of the ministry of commerce, and of the decree of April 6, 1899, of the ministry of agriculture (which has jurisdiction over mineral lands). The administrative officials of the local governments are directed to fill out a schedule blank for each establishment, unless the strike or lockout affects only small establishments in the same administrative district, when one schedule may be used for all the establishments in dispute. The material is then sent directly to the bureau of labor statistics, where an examination of the statements is made in regard to completeness, consistency, etc. In order to discover strikes that may have been overlooked by the local officials, and to secure the greatest possible measure of accuracy and completeness, newspapers published by workmen, reports of organizations, and other publications are consulted, and the strike and lockout material is submitted for verification to the factory inspectors under whose supervision the establishments involved are placed. A strike or lockout to be included in the Austrian reports must involve at least ten persons. In order to present definite information on the subject, the schedule of inquiry calls for full statements regarding the hours of labor, the rates of wages, and the weekly earnings of the persons in the various occupations affected by the strike or lockout, even if the question of hours or wages is not involved in the dispute.

In view of the difficulty of presenting the various phases of labor disputes in tabular form, the reports give a summarized account of each dispute. This feature is probably carried to a greater extent in the Austrian reports than in the reports of other countries, and is supplemented by the reproduction of important documents, such as the minutes of arbitration committees, proclamations of either party, formal demands upon each other, etc.

At the request of the labor organizations, special attention has been given to reporting unlawful acts which have occurred during the disputes, for the purpose of showing the effectiveness of the control of the workmen's organizations. The facts reported include statements regarding the violation of labor contracts, attacks upon persons or property, etc. An effort is also made to show the extent to which strikes have been managed by labor organizations, the amount of money contributed to the support of those thrown out of work, etc.

As now published, the Austrian reports on strikes and lockouts contain a series of six tables, showing: Strikes for the current year according to geographical distribution; strikes according to industries; a general summary of strikes; comparative summary of strikes for a series of years beginning with 1896; details for each individual strike during the current year, and details for each individual lockout. The tables are preceded by an explanatory and descriptive analysis, with charts showing fluctuations. Appendixes contain brief reviews of industrial and labor conditions, statistics of trade unions, and notes relating to the strikes and lockouts reported.

The statistics relate to the Crown lands represented in the Imperial Austrian Parliament, namely, Bohemia, Bukowina, Upper Austria, Lower Austria, K \ddot{u} stenland, Moravia, Styria, Galicia, Tyrol and Vorarlberg, Silesia, Carinthia, Salzburg, Carniola, and Dalmatia.

In Belgium, statistics of strikes have been collected and published monthly by the Belgian bureau of labor since January, 1896, in accordance with the law of April 12, 1895, which created this bureau and which requires the publication of this information. The collection of the statistics of strikes and lockouts is regulated by a ministerial circular of November 22, 1895, which requires that whenever a strike or lockout occurs, the bureau of labor is to be notified immediately by the heads of the communes. These officials must send a statement of the name and business of the establishment, the number of strikers, and their demands. The labor office then sends copies of the schedule of inquiries to the communal officials, who at the close of the strike must fill out one schedule for each establishment involved. The usual methods of verifying the data in the schedules and securing information as to strikes not reported by the officials, by making use of labor journals, reports of correspondence, etc., are followed. If necessary, agents of the bureau are sent to the scene of the strike for the purpose of gathering information. The "correspondents" of the bureau, who are agents permanently located at the large industrial centers, are made use of in securing data regarding strikes possessing unusual features. When the schedules reach the bureau of labor, they are combined in making up the reports of the general, or "group" strikes, as the strikes in which more than one establishment is involved are designated. In this manner the central office exercises complete control over the classification of the disputes into general or single strikes.

The official definition of a strike reads: "The cessation of work by several workmen at the same time, with the clearly defined purpose of imposing certain requirements on the proprietor or directors of the establishment." A lockout occurs when "the proprietors or directors of an establishment dismiss their workmen and decide not to take them again into service unless they submit to certain clearly defined requirements." These definitions would not include sympathetic strikes or lockouts, but, because of the importance of this class of disputes, they are included in the Belgian statistics.

In 1903 the Belgian labor bureau published a compilation of statistics of strikes and lockouts covering the years 1896 to 1900, ^(a) consisting of an analysis, details in tabular form for each strike, and summary tables showing the results of strikes and lockouts by industries, by causes, and by methods of settlement; the duration by causes; and the monthly distribution by industries. This report, together with annual summaries which appeared in the monthly Revue du Travail of that office since 1901, constitutes the source from which the Belgian statistics in the present report have been obtained. These statistics cover the years 1896 to 1904. In 1907 a summary of strikes and lockouts of the year 1906 was published, but as no such summary for 1905 was given in any of the bulletins or other publications of the Belgian labor bureau the data for 1905 and 1906 have been omitted from the present compilation.

Canada has published strike and lockout reports since October, 1900, in the monthly Labor Gazette issued by the Canadian department of labor. These consist of brief descriptive accounts of individual trade disputes in text and tabular form and annual summaries with comparative statements of strikes and lockouts of each year since 1901. The annual summaries have been mostly used in the present report, which covers strikes and lockouts in Canada during the years 1901 to 1905.

In Denmark statistics of strikes and lockouts have been collected since the beginning of the year 1897, in compliance with a law passed December 16, 1895. The information relates to all strikes and lockouts resulting in a suspension of work and is obtained by means of schedules of inquiry sent to the employees and employers concerned, and returned by them. The statistics have been published in brief form each year in the statistical yearbook of Denmark. In 1901 the data for the three years 1897, 1898, and 1899 were published collectively in a more detailed form in a report of the Danish statistical bureau. ^(b) This report contains an analysis and summary of the strikes and lockouts, copies of the schedules of inquiry, and details of each individual strike and lockout occurring in 1897, 1898, and 1899. The principal facts shown are the number, time, duration, causes, and results of strikes and lockouts, the number and location of establishments involved, the number and occupations of persons affected, wage loss, assistance received, and cases of arbitration. In the present compilation the data for the years 1897 to 1905 obtained from these different sources have been combined in the same tables wherever this was practicable. Some of the facts can be shown only for the years 1897 to 1899.

Statistics of strikes and lockouts in Finland are contained in a publication issued in 1907 by the department of industry of that country. This report, which is the first of a series devoted to a general review of the labor situation in Finland, gives the principal facts concerning each strike and lockout occurring during the years 1903, 1904, 1905, and 1906, respectively, the data being arranged in chronological order. Owing to the varied character of the information presented and the absence, in many cases, of essential facts, no attempt at tabulation of the material has been made; hence the data concerning this country have not been included in the present compilation.

In France the collection and publication of statistics of strikes was begun by the French bureau of labor immediately upon its organization, October 1, 1891. Since 1860 efforts have been made by the ministry of commerce and industry to obtain reports of strikes from the prefects of the departments. In 1885 a circular calling for such reports and specifying the points to be covered was sent to each of the prefects, but the returns received were very incomplete and were not published, except that the statistics contained in the report of the French bureau of labor for the years 1890 and 1891, published in 1892, (a) were compiled largely from the data thus obtained. Subsequent ministerial orders concerning the reporting of strikes and lockouts were issued November 20, 1892, December 10, 1895, and December 15, 1905. At the present time the prefects of the departments are required to collect the original data concerning strikes and lockouts occurring within their jurisdiction and to report within one month to the national labor bureau on schedules provided by the latter. In general, one schedule is prepared for each strike, although in extensive general strikes a separate schedule is sometimes prepared for each establishment. In the labor bureau the material is subjected to a careful revision, and by using information secured from newspapers and other unofficial sources an attempt is made to secure completeness.

A feature which is carried out more fully in the French reports than in the reports for other countries is the effort to show the condition of the industry in the locality where the dispute has occurred. This is done by making an investigation of the industry in that locality in regard to the number of persons and the number of establishments affected by the dispute, while data regarding the rates of wages and the hours of labor before and after the strike are collected, regardless of whether wages and hours of labor were causes of the dispute.

^a Statistique des Grèves survenues en France pendant les années 1890 et 1891.

In the schedule of inquiry the average number of persons on strike during each quarter of the period of the strike's duration is asked for, and in the tabulated statement of strikes both the average number and the greatest number of strikers during the strike is given. In addition the number of men, women, and children is reported.

The scope of the strike reports has not changed materially since they first began to be published. They cover strikes in all industries, including agriculture, forestry, and mining. Beginning with the report for 1893 (*) they also contain information relating to the results obtained with regard to the application of the law of December 27, 1892, concerning conciliation and arbitration.

The French reports on strikes, conciliation, and arbitration, as now published, contain, in addition to an introduction and analysis, detailed tables showing for each year the facts collected for each strike and lockout arranged by industries; a detailed table showing for each occupation the causes and results of strikes; summary tables showing the results of strikes by industries, by causes, and by months; the number, duration, and results of strikes according to the number of persons taking part; the number and results of strikes according to their duration; tables, maps, and charts showing the distribution of strikes by departments; the proportion of strikes to the total working population, and detailed accounts of all cases where the law regarding conciliation and arbitration in trade disputes was applied. The report for 1899 contains a series of eight tables giving a recapitulation of strikes and lockouts during the ten years from 1890 to 1899. The reports thus far published cover labor disputes occurring during the years 1890 to 1905, inclusive.

The German Government did not begin the publication of statistics of strikes and lockouts until 1899. The reports cover disputes in all the States comprising the German Empire. They relate to disputes in industrial occupations; that is, in all industries exclusive of agriculture and forestry and the State and communal services. The returns are published quarterly in summary form in the quarterly journal of the imperial statistical bureau (b) and the detailed statistics, summary, and analysis are published for the year in the form of an annual report. (c)

The data regarding strikes and lockouts are collected for the whole Empire under authority of the decree of the Federal council of June 10, 1898. This decree does not define a strike, but merely directs that information shall be collected in regard to every collective cessation of work by several workers in trade or industry and every collective exclusion of several workers from work in trade or industry. The regulations further specified that the duty of furnishing the information rests upon the local police officials unless other officials are selected for this purpose by the governments of the States. The police fill out a schedule blank at the close of each strike or lockout in their district, and immediately send the schedule to the higher administrative officials of the State. They also send a list of strikes and lockouts which have begun, but are not yet concluded in the quarterly period. The higher State officials, with the assistance of the factory inspectors, subject the material to a thorough examination, indicate which strikes are general or group strikes in more than one police district, and at the close of the quarter forward the material to the imperial statistical office. In this office a careful verification of the facts stated in the schedules is made, and an effort is made to guard against omissions by comparing the data in the schedules with those secured from their file of labor newspapers, which is scanned for the purpose of obtaining references to the strikes, lockouts, or other data which may have escaped the observation of the police officials.

The definition of a strike as stated in the decree of the Federal council is enlarged in the instructions to those collecting the data, in which it is specified that a strike is any collective cessation of work by several workers in trade or industry which has for its object the obtaining of specific demands from the employer. A lockout is any collective exclusion from work of several workers in trade or industry which has for its purpose the obtaining of specific demands from the workmen. Beyond the designation "several" no definite number of persons is given as the minimum necessary for classing a dispute as a strike or lockout. Under certain circumstances, therefore, two persons may be the total number involved in a strike or lockout, and these two persons may be in two establishments. In addition to these, sympathetic strikes and lockouts are also reported, though the definitions given above would not include such disputes.

The reports as now published contain an analysis and summary tables of the strikes and lockouts, copies of the schedules of inquiry, and tables showing in detail, by locality and industry for each dispute, the duration, number of establishments affected and their employees, number of strikers and others thrown out of employment, causes, results, manner of settlement, etc. The reports thus far published cover the years 1899 to 1905.

In Great Britain statistics covering labor disputes for the United Kingdom have been published since 1888 in the form of annual reports by the labor department of the British Board of Trade. (^a) The report for 1888 is not so comprehensive as those for subsequent years, and the data for that year have not, therefore, been used in the present report. A number of important changes have been made from time to time in the method of presentation of these statistics, which make an accurate comparison of the data for the entire period impossible. Thus in the earlier reports, from 1888 to 1893, strikes and lockouts were considered separately in many of the important statistical tables, while in later years they are shown together under the general term of disputes. From 1888 to 1896 all strikes and lockouts that were reported to the department were included in the compilations, but beginning with 1897 disputes involving fewer than ten persons or resulting in less than one day's stoppage of work are not considered, except where the aggregate duration of a dispute exceeds one hundred working days. Other changes are mentioned in the form of notes to the tables and in the analysis. The collection of the original data is done by the labor department of the Board of Trade. Information regarding strikes and lockouts is obtained by consulting a large number of newspapers, trade papers, reports of unions, reports of employers' associations, etc. As soon as the department learns of the occurrence of a strike, two schedules of inquiry are mailed to the employers and to the workingmen. One schedule is to be filled out at once in order to furnish a preliminary statement for the monthly report, while the second is to be filled out at the end of the strike. By comparing the statements made by the two parties to the controversy and by securing additional information where necessary, the department obtains the data it desires. Because of the great extent to which the organization of employers and employees has been carried, it is possible to secure information without employing special agents or making use of local Government officials. The "labor correspondents," however, are frequently called upon to assist in this part of the work.

The annual reports as now published contain an account of the disputes during the year, an analysis by industry groups, summary tables of strikes and lockouts and of conciliation and arbitration proceedings for the year and in comparison with a number of preceding years, tabular statements giving the principal facts concerning each of the most important strikes during the year and of the great strikes occurring each year since 1888, detailed statements of the work of trade boards of conciliation and arbitration, and specimen schedules of inquiry.

In Italy strike and lockout statistics have been published annually since 1892. Until the close of the year 1903 the work of compilation and verification of these statistics was in the hands of the general statistical bureau of the ministry of agriculture, industry, and commerce, but beginning with the year 1904 this work was transferred to the bureau of labor in the same ministry.

The original data are collected by the prefects of the provinces on schedules furnished by the bureau of labor, and cover strikes and lockouts in industrial and agricultural occupations.

The first report ^(a) covers data for the years 1879 to 1891 and for a few months in 1878. No changes of any importance have been made in the subject-matter considered or method of presentation since that time. As now published the annual reports contain detailed tables showing for each strike and lockout the locality, number, and occupation of strikers and persons locked out; the cause or object, result, duration, total working-days lost, and whether the dispute was accompanied by violence; descriptive notes of each strike and lockout; summary tables showing strikes by duration, number of strikers, causes, results, working-days lost, etc., and a copy of the schedule of inquiry used in obtaining the information. The annual reports thus far published contain strike data for the years 1878 to 1903.

The Russian department of industrial affairs in the ministry of commerce recently published a report of the labor inspector on strikes in Russia during the years 1895 to 1904. A copy of this report was not available for the present compilation.

In the Netherlands statistics of strikes and lockouts have been published since 1901 in the form of supplements to the Review of the Central Bureau of Statistics of the Netherlands.^(b) The information is given in the form of an analysis, with summary tables, and a tabular statement showing in detail the important facts concerning each strike and lockout.

Spain has published but one strike report,^(c) which covers the last five months of the year 1904 and the entire year 1905. This report, which was issued by the Spanish labor bureau, is announced to be the first of an annual series. The report consists of a tabular statement of each individual strike and summary tables, with analyses, showing the number of strikes, their duration, the number of persons employed in establishments involved, the number of strikers and others affected, their occupation and industries, and the causes and results of strikes. In the present compilation data for 1905 only have been used.

In Switzerland statistics of strikes and lockouts for the period 1860 to 1894 were published in the annual report of the managing committee of the Swiss federation of labor ^(d) for the year 1894. The report for the succeeding year contained strike data for the year 1895, after which the publication of this information was discontinued.

AUSTRIA.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in Austria, compiled from the annual reports of the Austrian Government, cover labor disputes occurring in the various industrial occupations from 1891 to 1905 in the Crown lands represented in the Austrian Parliament. While the Austrian reports for the years 1891 to 1897 do not include the mining industry in the statistical presentations, the reports for 1898 and subsequent years contain summary statistics for each year beginning with 1894 which include statistics for the mining industry. This makes it possible to present a series of comparative figures for the years 1894 to 1905. In the Austrian reports strikes and lockouts are considered separately in all the tabulations, and the same has been done in the present compilation.

The following table gives the summary of all the important facts published in relation to strikes in Austria during the years 1891 to 1905:

During the fifteen-year period covered by the table relating to strikes 4,136 strikes were reported, involving 23,767 establishments, 728,605 strikers, and resulting in a total loss of 11,673,267 working-days. Of the 4,132 strikes for which the results were known, 860, or 20.8 per cent, succeeded, 1,670, or 40.4 per cent, succeeded partly, and 1,602, or 38.8 per cent, failed.

During the twelve-year period, from 1894 to 1905, for which comparable statistics for all industries have been published, 3,759 strikes were reported. These affected 19,125 establishments, involved 672,337 strikers and 69,610 other employees who were thrown out of work on account of strikes, and resulted in a loss of 9,901,919 working-days by strikers and of 854,769 working-days by others thrown out of work, or a total of 10,756,688 days. Of the 3,759 strikes reported during this period, 778, or 20.7 per cent, succeeded, 1,560, or 41.5 per cent, succeeded partly, and 1,421, or 37.8 per cent, failed. Of the 672,337 strikers involved in these strikes, 73,387, or 10.9 per cent, were in strikes which succeeded, 419,010, or 62.3 per cent, in strikes which succeeded partly, and 179,940, or 26.8 per cent, in strikes which failed.

The following table shows the number of strikes and strikers according to the results of strikes for each group of industries and each year from 1894 to 1905:

During the twelve-year period for which comparable statistics are given, the group of building trades had the largest number of strikes, namely, 567 out of 3,759, or 15.1 per cent of the total number. The group involving the largest number of establishments was that of wood working, caoutchouc, carved materials, etc., there being 4,000 establishments out of a total of 19,125 establishments involved in strikes, or 20.9 per cent, in this group. In the number of strikers, however, the mining industry exceeded by far every other group of industries. Thus, during the period, there were 209,802 strikers in this industry, or 31.2 per cent of the entire number.

The following table shows the number of strikes each year from 1894 to 1905, grouped according to the number of days of their duration:

The strikes were mostly of short duration, 2,034 out of a total of 3,759, or 54.1 per cent, lasting from 1 to 5 days. Only 45 strikes occurring in the twelve years lasted over 100 days.

The next table shows, for each year, the magnitude of the strikes as measured by the number of persons involved:

This table shows that a large proportion of the strikes in Austria were strikes of considerable magnitude, 1,085 out of a total of 3,759 involving over 100 employees.

In the table which follows the strikes are grouped according to the number of working-days lost, which probably is the true measure of magnitude, since it takes into account both the number of persons involved and the time during which they were idle:

Owing to the short duration of many of the strikes, the aggregate working-days lost did not exceed 100 days in 1,517, or 40.4 per cent of the total number of strikes.

The summary tables of strikes, as published in the Austrian reports, do not show the results of strikes by principal causes, but make each individual demand a separate unit, regardless of the number of strikes. Thus the statistics which follow show the number of times each demand figured as an incentive to a strike, and the results of such demands. The figures for the years 1891 to 1893 were not in such form that they could be used in this connection. Those for the years 1894 to 1897, inclusive, do not include strikes in the mining industries, while those for 1898 to 1905 show the demands made and results for all the strikes reported in the preceding tables.

The following table shows the causes or objects for which strikes were undertaken and the results for each year from 1894 to 1905.

CAUSES AND RESULTS OF STRIKES IN AUSTRIA, BY YEARS, 1894 TO 1905.

[Strikes due to two or more causes have been tabulated under each cause; hence the totals for this table, if computed, would not agree with those for the preceding tables. Strikes in the mining industry previous to 1898 are not included.]

BELGIUM.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in Belgium were compiled from a report covering the years 1896 to 1900 and from annual summaries which appeared in the monthly bulletins of the Belgian labor bureau. As the data in the annual summaries are not as complete as those in the report for the years 1896 to 1900, it was not possible to present in each table a complete series of figures for the whole period from 1896 to 1904.

The following table shows the number of strikes and lockouts, establishments involved, and persons affected each year from 1896 to 1904:

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS IN BELGIUM, BY YEARS, 1896 TO 1904.

During the nine-year period from 1896 to 1904 there were 961 strikes and lockouts reported, affecting 230,727 strikers and employees locked out. Of these strikes and lockouts 957 affected 2,019 establishments, and in the case of 948 it was reported that 44,637 other employees were thrown out of employment on account of the strikes and lockouts.

The next table shows the percentage of success, failure, or partial success of strikes and lockouts which occurred each year from 1896 to 1904:

During each year of the nine-year period over one-half of the strikes and lockouts resulted in favor of the employers, the percentage of strikes in their favor ranging from 56 to 76. Measured by the number of strikers and other employees involved, the success of the employers was even greater, the percentage of such persons affected in strikes and lockouts which resulted in favor of employers ranging from 48 to 90.

In presenting the strikes and lockouts by industries the original reports show the results only for the period from 1896 to 1900. For this reason two tables are here given, the one showing simply the number of strikes and strikers in each industry each year from 1896 to 1904, and the other showing the results by industries for the period 1896 to 1900:

The largest number of strikes and lockouts during the nine-year period, 247 or 25.7 per cent, was in the textile industry. The mining industry was next in importance, having 219 or 22.8 per cent of all the strikes and lockouts reported. Of the total number of strikers and employees locked out during the nine-year period 116,326, or 50.4 per cent, were in the mining industry.

CANADA.

The data for strikes and lockouts in Canada were obtained from the Labor Gazette, published by the Canadian department of labor. Annual summaries of statistics relative to trade disputes have been published each year since 1901, so that the tables herewith cover a period of six years, from 1901 to 1906, inclusive. This summary, which appears in the January issue of the Gazette each year, presents not only the statistics for the labor disputes of the preceding year, but also the data for all years from 1901 to the date of publication. No separation is made of strikes and lockouts.

The following table shows the number of trade disputes for each year for the period covered, the number of persons affected, and the approximate loss in working time:

During the six years covered by this report there were 715 strikes and lockouts, 687 of which affected 115,950 persons directly and 26,566 others indirectly. The number of persons indirectly affected constitutes 18.6 per cent of the total.

In the next table the number of strikes and lockouts is given for each year by results:

* Including 1 dispute which began prior to January, 1906, but was not definitely terminated until 1906.

On the basis of the table above, in which one strike is counted twice, 237 out of 716 disputes, or 33.1 per cent, were settled in favor of the employers, while in a slightly smaller number, 219, or 30.6 per cent of the total, the employees were successful. A compromise was effected in 167 cases and the employees were reported as partially successful in 12 others.

The following table shows the number of strikes and lockouts each year by industries:

DENMARK.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in Denmark for the three years 1897, 1898, and 1899 were compiled from a report published in 1901 by the Danish statistical bureau. Those for the years 1900 to 1904 were obtained from the yearbooks of the same bureau. The information relates to all disputes resulting in a suspension of work. The method of presentation in the yearbooks differs materially from that used in the first-mentioned compilation, and the statistics for the years 1900 to 1904 are much less complete than those for the preceding years. Hence the statistics could not in every case be given for the whole period from 1897 to 1904.

The following table gives a summary of the more important facts published in relation to strikes and lockouts in Denmark from 1897 to 1904:

FRANCE.

The statistics of strikes in France were obtained from the annual reports of the French labor bureau published since 1892. They cover all strikes reported during the years 1890 to 1905. As the method of presentation has remained practically unchanged during this entire period, the figures can be readily compared from year to year. Until recent years lockouts were not considered in these reports, and they have therefore been excluded from this compilation.

The following table gives a summary, by years, of the more important facts published in relation to strikes in France during the years 1890 to 1905.

In the French reports the cause of the dispute is taken as the unit, the figures given in the annual summaries showing the number of times each cause figured as an incentive to a strike.

The following tables show the causes of strikes and their results for each year from 1890 to 1905, inclusive.

CAUSES AND RESULTS OF STRIKES IN FRANCE, BY YEARS, 1890 TO 1905.

[Strikes due to two or more causes have been tabulated under each cause. Hence the totals for this table, if computed, would not agree with those for the preceding tables.]

GERMANY.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in Germany were compiled from the seven annual reports thus far published. They cover strikes and lockouts occurring in the various industries of the Empire. The strikes and lockouts are considered separately in the German reports, and therefore in the present compilation the figures given represent strikes and lockouts ending in each year.

The two following tables give a summary of the more important facts published in relation to strikes and lockouts, respectively, in Germany for the years 1899 to 1905:

The strikes were mostly of short duration, 60.3 per cent of the total number which occurred during the seven-year period having lasted ten days or less. The lockouts, on the other hand, were mostly of longer duration, 58.8 per cent of the total number having lasted over twenty days.

In the next two tables are shown, respectively, the number of strikers involved in strikes each year, and the number of strikes which succeeded, succeeded partly, and failed, the number of establishments and the number of persons affected during the seven-year period, grouped in each case according to the number of strikers involved.

In the German reports, where the causes of strikes are given in the tabulations, the demand and not the strike is taken as the unit—that is, each individual demand is made a separate unit, regardless of the number of strikes. The following table shows the number of strikes in which each cause has figured and the result for each year from 1899 to 1905:

CAUSES AND RESULTS OF STRIKES IN GERMANY, BY YEARS, 1899 TO 1905.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in Great Britain and Ireland were compiled from the annual reports published by the British labor department since 1889. The first report, that for 1888, is not so comprehensive as those for subsequent years, and has therefore been excluded from the present compilation. The report for 1889 includes 15 strikes which began in 1888. In all other cases, except where otherwise indicated, the figures for total strikes and lockouts represent those beginning in each specified year. The reports for 1889 to 1893, inclusive, consider strikes and lockouts separately in most of the tables, but in the reports for subsequent years the strikes and lockouts are combined. Other changes that may have been made in the method of presentation from time to time are mentioned in connection with the tables.

These various changes make it impossible to present for comparison in the same table the more important facts published in relation to labor disputes for the entire period. The three following tables, therefore, show the statistics of disputes, grouped by years for which they are comparable, namely, 1889 to 1893, 1894 and 1895, and 1896 to 1905.

During the five-year period from 1899 to 1893 there were 4,526 strikes reported, of which 1,815, or 40.1 per cent, resulted in favor of employees; 1,284, or 28.4 per cent, resulted in favor of employers; 1,055, or 23.3 per cent, were compromised; and 372, or 8.2 per cent, remained indefinite or unsettled at the close of the various years. Of the 4,526 strikes that occurred during the five years, particulars concerning the number of employees thrown out of work were reported for 3,428 strikes. In these strikes 1,852,193 employees were thrown out of work. Of the latter, 824,631, or 44.5 per cent, were in strikes which resulted in favor of employees; 382,545, or 20.7 per cent, in strikes which resulted in favor of employers; 610,295, or 32.9 per cent, in compromised strikes; and 34,722, or 1.9 per cent, in strikes the results of which were indefinite or unsettled.

During the two years 1894 and 1895 there were 1,937 strikes and lockouts, in 1,847 of which 588,003 employees were thrown out of work. Of the 1,937 disputes 675, or 34.9 per cent, resulted in favor of employees; 732, or 37.8 per cent, in favor of employers; 450, or 23.2 per cent, were compromised; and 80, or 4.1 per cent, remained indefinite or unsettled. Of the 588,003 employees thrown out of work, 135,205, or 23 per cent, were in disputes which resulted in favor of employees; 210,121, or 35.7 per cent, in disputes which resulted in favor of employers; 235,215, or 40 per cent, in compromised disputes; and 7,462, or 1.3 per cent, in disputes the results of which were indefinite or unsettled.

During the ten-year period from 1896 to 1905 there were 6,052 strikes and lockouts, of which 1,872, or 31 per cent, resulted in favor of employees; 2,313, or 38.2 per cent, in favor of employers; 1,817, or 30 per cent, were compromised; and 50, or 0.8 per cent, remained indefinite or unsettled. Of the 1,235,184 strikers and employees locked out, 356,789, or 28.9 per cent, were in disputes which resulted in favor of employees; 491,316, or 39.8 per cent, in disputes which resulted in favor of employers; 377,921, or 30.6 per cent, in disputes which were compromised; and 9,158, or 0.7 per cent, in disputes the results of which were indefinite or unsettled. There were, in addition, 549,760 other employees thrown out of work by these disputes.

Of the total disputes during the first period, 1889 to 1893, 2,944 resulted in an aggregate loss of 66,310,278 working-days. In addition to the strikes during this period, there were 113 lockouts, in 61 of which 129,348 employees were thrown out of work. Of the 1,937 strikes and lockouts during the second period, 1894 and 1895, 1,592 resulted in an aggregate loss of 14,864,748 working-days. The strikes and lockouts during the third period, 1896 to 1905, resulted in an aggregate loss of 48,965,098 working-days, 5,326,658, or 10.9 per cent, being lost in disputes which resulted in favor of employees; 29,973,988, or 61.2 per cent, in disputes which resulted in favor of employers; 13,265,452, or 27.1 per cent, in disputes which were compromised; and 399,000, or 0.8 per cent, in disputes the results of which were indefinite or unsettled.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts according to industries could not be grouped for the whole period as has been done in the case of other countries. The statistics for the years 1889 to 1892 were not in such form that they could be shown by industries. The two following tables therefore show for each year and group of industries from 1893 to 1895 the number and results of strikes and lockouts and the number of employees thrown out of work in strikes and lockouts for which they were reported and similar statistics, together with the total working-days lost, from 1896 to 1905:

While the above figures showing strikes and lockouts by industries are not comparable for longer periods than those shown in the tables, the report for 1905 contains a summary table showing the number of strikes and lockouts, employees affected, and aggregate working-days lost each year from 1893 to 1905, in which all the figures have been reduced to a comparable basis. This table appears below:

a In computing the aggregate days lost the employees indirectly affected are included. In the case of strikes and lockouts extending into 2 or more years the days lost are included in the total for the year in which they fell.

During this thirteen-year period the largest number of strikes and lockouts occurred in the mining and quarrying industries. With regard to the persons affected and the working-days lost the same group supplied over one-half the total number in each case.

The two following tables show the strikes and lockouts each year from 1897 to 1905, classified according to the number of persons affected and the number of working-days lost, respectively:

The strikes and lockouts were mostly small and of short duration. Thus, of a total of 5,125 strikes, 1,995, or 38.9 per cent, affected fewer than 50 persons, and 2,193, or 42.8 per cent, resulted in a loss of less than 500 working days.

In the following series of tables are shown, for each year, the causes of strikes and lockouts and their results. It will be noticed that the tables are not uniform throughout the period covered, 1889 to 1905, inclusive, inasmuch as the data secured for the earlier years of the period were not so complete as those for the later years.

In the first table, embracing all of the data secured for the years 1889 and 1890, the facts are given for strikes only, lockouts not having been considered by causes and results.

In the second table, embracing all of the data secured for the years 1891, 1892, and 1893, the facts are given separately for strikes and lockouts. It will be noticed that this table shows some statistics additional to those shown in the preceding one.

In the third table, embracing all of the data secured for the years 1894 and 1895, the facts for strikes and lockouts are inseparably combined. The statistics shown in this table are similar in form to those shown in the second one.

In the fourth and fifth tables, embracing, respectively, all the data secured for the years 1896 and 1897, and for the years 1898 to 1905, inclusive, the facts for strikes and lockouts are, as in the third table, inseparably combined. These tables differ from the third table in that they include statistics additional to those shown in that table, while they differ slightly from each other in the classification of certain of the facts covered. The tables follow.

ITALY.

The statistics of strikes in Italy were compiled from annual reports published since 1892 by the Italian statistical bureau. They cover labor disputes beginning with the year 1879 for general industrial occupations, not including agriculture. Separate reports of strikes in agricultural occupations have been published to cover the period beginning with the year 1881.

While the data for later years are more complete than for the earlier periods, the general method of presentation has changed but little since the first publication, so that the summaries are comparable from year to year throughout. Statistics of strikes and lock-outs are presented separately.

The following table presents a summary of the principal facts in relation to strikes in Italy in industries other than agriculture during the years 1879 to 1903, inclusive:

o This total does not agree with the total in table showing strikes by number of strikers involved, page 898; the computation is made, however, from figures in the original reports.

p Not including figures for 1879 to 1893.

The above table covers a period of 25 years, during which 5,267 strikes were reported; 5,220 of these strikes involved a total of 1,208,049 strikers, while in 5,184 strikes an aggregate loss of 12,203,266 working-days is reported. During the ten years 1894 to 1903 there were 561,422 men, 214,584 women, and 106,655 children under 15 years of age engaged in the strikes reported. Of the 5,124 strikes for which results were reported, 1,268, or 24.8 per cent, succeeded; 1,944, or 37.9 per cent, were partially successful, and 1,912, or 37.3 per cent, failed.

Strikes of agricultural laborers are not included in the foregoing table, and the following table is presented to show the number of strikes, strikers, and days lost in agricultural occupations for a period of 23 years:

a Not reported.

b Not including days of work lost in 8 lockouts in 8 establishments not reported.

c Not including days of work lost in 9 lockouts not reported.

From this table it appears that lockouts are of comparatively infrequent occurrence in Italian industries. The average length varies from a single day in 1880 to a little above two weeks in 1897 and 1903.

In the next table the strikes occurring within the period 1892 to 1903 are classified according to the industries affected. Results are shown for nearly all the strikes reported, as well as the number of strikers engaged. Strikes in agricultural employments are not included.

Textile industries lead in the number both of strikes and strikers. In only three groups—those of mining and quarrying, wood working, and transportation—does the number of successful strikes equal the number of those that failed. The totals show, as in the case of the table for the longer period on page 894, that the number of strikes succeeding partly slightly exceeds the number that failed, which in turn is considerably larger than the total number of successful strikes.

In the following tables are presented the strikes occurring within the same period as the above, showing the strikes and strikers for each year separately, in the same industry groups as were used in the foregoing table:

The two tables following show for industries other than agriculture the strikes occurring from 1879 to 1903, classified first by days of duration and second by number of strikers involved. The data for the years 1879 to 1891, inclusive, are combined, those for subsequent years being shown separately.

* This total does not agree with the figures given in the general table of strikes, p. 894; the figures are reproduced, however, as shown in the original report.

Slightly more than one-half of the total number of strikes reported in the first table above had a duration of 3 days or less, an additional 29.2 per cent lasting from 4 to 10 days. But 4.8 per cent lasted more than 30 days.

Of the 5,221 strikes considered in the second table, 34 per cent involved from 1 to 49 employees, an additional 20.4 per cent falling in the next class, so that 54.4 per cent of all the strikes involved fewer than 100 employees each.

The last series of tables presented for strikes in Italy show for industries other than agriculture the number of strikes each year from 1879 to 1903 for which results are reported, together with the number of employees involved in the strikes that succeeded, those that succeeded partly, and those that failed. These are classified according to the four principal causes, other causes being grouped under a fifth general head. The tables follow:

NETHERLANDS.

The statistics of strikes and lockouts in the Netherlands were compiled from annual reports published since 1901 by the Netherlands central bureau of statistics. The strikes and lockouts are considered separately in these reports and are so presented in the present compilation.

The two following tables give a summary of the strikes and lockouts in the Netherlands for each year of the period 1901 to 1905:

c Not including Sundays and holidays in 1901.

During the five-year period from 1901 to 1905 there were 603 strikes, 536 of which affected 1,354 establishments and 522 involved 59,410 strikers. The data showing working-days lost are given for the last two years only, and are incomplete. Of the 603 strikes which occurred during the five years, 170, or 28.2 per cent, succeeded; 160, or 26.5 per cent, succeeded partly; 216, or 35.8 per cent, failed; and in the case of 57, or 9.5 per cent, the result remained indefinite or was not reported.

During the same period there were 58 lockouts, of which 25, or 43.1 per cent, succeeded; 16, or 27.6 per cent, succeeded partly; 14, or 24.1 per cent, failed, and in the case of 3, or 5.2 per cent, the result was not reported.

The following table shows, by groups of industries and by years, the number and results of strikes and the number of establishments and strikers involved:

Of the 20 groups of industries enumerated above, that of building trades had the largest number of strikes and establishments affected. The industry group of transportation had the largest number of strikers involved, or more than one-half of the entire number. Next in importance with regard to the number of strikers involved were the groups of building trades and mining. These three groups of industries furnished 77.4 per cent of all the strikers in the Netherlands during the five-year period.

In the next two tables the strikes are grouped according to their duration, in the first by years, and in the second for the entire period, by results:

Of the 521 strikes for which the duration was reported 305, or 58.5 per cent, lasted 7 days or less. The proportion of short strikes is greatest among those which succeeded and smallest among those which failed.

In the tabulation of the causes of strikes in the Netherlands reports the strike was taken as the unit in 1901, but for the subsequent years the cause has been taken as the unit, each strike appearing as often as there were causes, whenever there were two or more of the latter.

The next tables show the strikes in the Netherlands by years, causes, and results, during 1901 to 1905:

SPAIN.

The statistics of strikes in Spain were compiled from the report published by the bureau of social reform of that country. The period covered by this report is for the year January 1 to December 31, 1905.

The following table shows the number of employees in establishments involved in strikes and the number of strikers, by industries and sex of strikers:

During the year there were 130 strikes reported, in which 20,176 strikers, of whom 19,354 were males and 822 females, were involved. Of the total strikes 46, or 35.4 per cent, were successful; 22, or 16.9 per cent, were partially successful; and 62, or 47.7 per cent, failed. The number of employees involved in strikes which were successful was 3,256, or 16.1 per cent of all strikers; in the partially successful strikes there were 2,726, or 13.5 per cent of all the strikers involved; and 14,194, or 70.4 per cent of all strikers involved, participated in strikes which failed.

Of the total number of male strikers reported, 5,267, or 27.2 per cent, were engaged in the building trades. The mining and quarrying industries come next in order, with 4,652 male strikers.

The following table shows the strikes by industries and results:

Of all the strikers reported 9,953, or 49.3 per cent, were engaged in the mining and quarrying and the building trades; and 3,610, or 17.9 per cent, were in the metal-working trades.

The largest number of strikers in any one industry was found in the building trades, in which 13 per cent were in strikes which were successful, 4.4 per cent were in strikes which were partially successful, and 82.6 per cent were in strikes which failed.

The three following tables show, respectively, the strikes for the year, classified according to duration, size of establishments, and the number of strikers involved:

Of the 130 strikes 80, or 61.5 per cent, lasted less than 11 days; and 70, or 53.8 per cent, involved less than 51 strikers.

In 40 strikes, or 30.8 per cent of the total number, wage disputes were the sole cause of strikes; while in 26 others, or 20 per cent, they were one of the causes. In disputes in which wages alone formed the basis of strikes, 30 per cent were successful, 25 per cent partly successful, and 45 per cent failed.

CHAPTER V.

THE LAW RELATING TO STRIKES, BLACKLISTING, BOYCOTTS, ETC.

CHAPTER V.

THE LAW RELATING TO STRIKES, BLACKLISTING, BOYCOTTS, ETC.

THE STATUTE LAW.

Legislation on the subject of labor disturbances as such is mainly of recent enactment in this country, and is far from being uniform in the different States, some having few or no laws of the class indicated, while others have enactments covering pretty fully the field to be considered. Prior to the passage of these laws, such legal action as was had on this subject was based on the principles of the common law, and chiefly on the law governing criminal conspiracy. Proceedings in equity to secure injunctions have been and are still among the most common efforts to obtain relief from the courts in cases of difficulties arising from labor disputes.

The codes of many States contain statutes on the subject of conspiracy, which are practically enactments of the rules of the common law on this subject. A number of these exempt labor combinations from their operation, while others make special reference to conspiracies against workingmen. In the compilation of laws given herewith, only those conspiracy laws are reproduced which contain specific mention of labor in some form, general laws on criminal conspiracy being omitted. The same rule is followed in the presentation of other statutes, those only being here set forth which either by obvious intent or by the interpretation of the courts are seen to be applicable to the subject in hand.

These statutes are followed, where such decisions are available, by brief notes on the decisions of courts in cases tried under their provisions. The laws published are intended to include all those in force at the end of the year 1906.

A brief statement of the common law applicable to strikes and their attendant incidents is appended, together with references to some representative decisions.

Laws providing for mediation and the arbitration of labor disputes have been enacted in a considerable number of States and by the Congress of the United States. A list of the States having laws or constitutional provisions of this nature is given below, together with a reference to the law itself:

California (Acts of 1891, chap. 51), Colorado (Acts of 1897, chap. 2, as amended by Acts of 1903, chap. 136), Connecticut (Gen. Stat. 1902, secs. 4708 to 4713), Idaho (Const., art. 13, sec. 7; Polit. Code 1901, secs. 641 to 654), Illinois (A. S. 1896, chap. 48, secs. 8 to 15, as amended by Acts of 1899, p. 75, Acts of 1901, p. 90, and Acts of 1903, p. 84), Indiana (A. S. 1901, secs. 7050a to 7050q), Kansas (Gen. Stat. 1901, secs. 332 to 341), Louisiana (R. L. 1897, p. 20, secs. 1 to 13), Maryland (Pub. Gen. Laws 1903, art. 7, secs. 1 to 6; Acts of 1904, chap. 671), Massachusetts (R. L. 1902, chap. 106, secs. 1 to 6, as amended by Acts of 1904, chap. 313), Michigan (C. L. 1897, secs. 559 to 568; Acts of 1903, act No. 69), Minnesota (Acts of 1895, chap. 170), Missouri (Acts of 1901, p. 195; Acts of 1903, p. 218), Montana (Codes and Stat. 1895, secs. 3330 to 3338), New Jersey (Gen. Stat. 1895, p. 73, secs. 22 to 39), New York (R. S. 1901, p. 2088, sec. 1d; p. 2111, secs. 140 to 149), Ohio (Bates' A. S., 3d ed., secs. 4364-90 to 4364-106), Pennsylvania (B. P. Dig. 1895, p. 132, secs. 58 and 67 to 80; p. 290, secs. 1 to 9), Texas (R. Civ. Stat. 1895, arts. 61a to 61k), Utah (Const., art. 16, sec. 2; Acts of 1901, chap. 68), Washington (Acts of 1903, chap. 58), Wisconsin (A. S. 1898, secs. 1729b to 1729j), Wyoming (Const., art. 19, sec. 1), and the United States (C. S. 1901, p. 3205).

Of these States, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Utah, and Wisconsin have State boards; while in Kansas, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Texas, and Washington only local boards are provided for. Besides the State boards, local or special boards may be formed in California, Colorado, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, and Wisconsin. In New Jersey and New York an appeal may be taken from the local to the State boards; while in Colorado, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Ohio, and Wisconsin the local boards are authorized to ask for and receive advice and assistance from the State boards. In a number of the States a member of a labor organization must be appointed a member of the board; in general, both employers and employees must be represented.

It is made the duty of nearly all the State boards to attempt to mediate between the parties to a dispute when information is received of an actual or threatened labor trouble. Arbitration may be undertaken on application from either party in California, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Ohio, and Wisconsin, while the application of both parties is required in Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Texas, and Utah. The Missouri statute makes it the duty of both parties to submit their disputes to the State board, though the statute provides for arbitration even though one of the parties refuses to agree thereto. An application will be entertained if made by but one party, under the Pennsylvania law, but the assent of the other party must be obtained before arbitration is actually undertaken. In Washington, the commissioner of labor is to attempt to procure a submission to arbitration in case his individual efforts at mediation are unsuccessful. An agreement to maintain the status quo pending arbitration proceedings is quite commonly required.

The attendance of witnesses may in most instances be enforced by subpoenas, and one or all the members of the various boards are in general authorized to administer oaths.

The modes of enforcement of obedience to the award of the boards are various. Some States depend on publicity alone, though in others the statute gives the decisions of the boards the effect of a judgment of a court of law, which may be enforced by execution; in other States disobedience to such decisions is to be punished as for contempt of court. The costs of these courts are generally to be met by the State; in Texas and Utah, however, the costs must be paid by the parties and are to be apportioned by the boards as a part of the award.

Wyoming has no statutory provision, the legislature having failed thus far to carry out the provision of the constitution directing the formation of a board.

The United States statute applies only to common carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and provides for an attempt to be made at mediation by two designated Government officials in case of any controversy between common carriers and their employees, and for the formation of a board of arbitration, consisting of the same officials, together with certain other parties to be selected, in case the attempt at mediation fails. This board, however, is to be formed only at the request or upon the consent of both parties to the controversy.

On account of their length and general similarity, further reference to arbitration laws is omitted. Other statutes mentioned above as relating directly to labor disputes are given herewith.

SECTION 6. Any employee of a railroad corporation who, in pursuance of an agreement or combination by two or more persons to do, or procure to be done, any act in contemplation or furtherance of a dispute between such corporation and its employees, unlawfully or in violation of his duty or contract, stops or unnecessarily delays or abandons, or in any way injures a locomotive or any car or train of cars on the railroad track of such corporation, or in any way hinders or obstructs the use of any locomotive, car or train of cars on the railroad of such corporation, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the State prison or in jail not exceeding one year.

CODE OF PUBLIC GENERAL LAWS, 1903.

ARTICLE 27.—Labor combinations not unlawful.

SECTION 33. An agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute between employers and workmen, shall not be indictable as a conspiracy, if such act, committed by one person, would not be punishable as an offense; nothing in this section shall affect the law relating to riot, unlawful assembly, breach of the peace, or any offense against any person or against property.

This act does not prevent the issue of an injunction forbidding a boycott and interference with business of plaintiff or with his workmen or customers. 59 Atl. 721.

REVISED LAWS OF 1902.

CHAPTER 106.—Intimidation of employees.

SECTION 11. No person shall, by intimidation or force, prevent or seek to prevent a person from entering into or continuing in the employment of any person or corporation.

The gist of the offense is the seeking to prevent one employed by a corporation from continuing in its employ by means of intimidation and force, and it is not necessary to allege in the indictment the particular acts in detail. 128 Mass. 70.

Intimidation is not limited to threats of violence or of physical injury to person or property. There may be a moral intimidation which is illegal. 167 Mass. 98.

Displaying banners with devices as a means of threats and intimidation to prevent persons from entering or continuing in the employment of plaintiffs is a violation of this section. Plaintiffs are not restricted to their remedy at law, but are entitled to relief by injunction. 147 Mass. 212.

COMPILED LAWS OF 1897.

Intimidation of employees.

SECTION 11343. If any person or persons shall, by threats, intimidations, or otherwise, and without authority of law, interfere with, or in any way molest, or attempt to interfere with, or in any way molest or disturb, without such authority, any mechanic or other laborer, in the quiet and peaceable pursuit of his lawful avocation, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be severally punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail where the offense shall have been committed, not less than one month nor more than one year, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court; but if such punishment be by fine, the offender shall be imprisoned in such jail until the same be paid, not exceeding ninety days.

The distribution by members of a union of a boycott circular tended to coerce and intimidate, and was unlawful, as was picketing to intercept workmen and customers. 77 N. W. 13.

REVISED LAWS OF 1905.

Interference with employment—Participation in strikes.

SECTION 1822. No individual, corporation, member of any firm, or any agent, officer, or employee of any of them, shall contrive or conspire to prevent any person from obtaining or holding any employment, or discharge, or procure or attempt to procure the discharge of, any person from employment, by reason of his having engaged in a strike.

SEC. 1823. No person, whether acting directly or through an agent, or as the agent or employee of another, shall require, as a condition precedent to employment, any written statement as to the participation of the applicant in a strike, or as to his personal record, save as to his conviction of a public offense, for more than one year immediately preceding the date of his application therefor; nor shall any person, acting in any of the aforesaid capacities, use or require blanks or forms of application for employment in contravention of this section.

Conspiracy against workmen.

SECTION 4867. Whenever two or more persons shall conspire—

5. To prevent another from exercising any lawful trade or calling, or from doing any other lawful act, by force, threats, intimidation, or by interfering or threatening to interfere with tools, implements, or property belonging to or used by another, or with the use or employment thereof;

6. Or to commit any act injurious to the public health, public morals, trade, or commerce, or for the perversion or obstruction of public justice or the due administration of the laws—

Every such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 4868. No conspiracy, except one of those enumerated in section 4867, shall be punished criminally. No agreement, except to commit a felony upon the person of another, or to commit arson or burglary, shall amount to a conspiracy, unless some act besides such agreement be done to effect the object thereof by one or more of the parties to such agreement. The orderly and peaceable assembling or cooperation of persons employed in any calling, trade, or handicraft, for the purpose of obtaining an advance in the rate of wages or compensation, or of maintaining such rate, is not conspiracy.

Blacklisting.

SECTION 5097. * * * It shall be unlawful for any two or more corporations or employers to combine, agree to combine, or confer together for the purpose of interfering with any person in procuring, or in preventing him from procuring, employment, or to secure the discharge of any employee by threats, promises, circulating blacklists, or any other means whatsoever. It shall be unlawful for any company or corporation, or any agent or employee thereof, to blacklist any discharged employee, or by word or writing seek to prevent, hinder, or restrain a discharged employee, or one who has voluntarily left its employ, from obtaining employment elsewhere. Every person and corporation violating any of the foregoing provisions shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

This section is constitutional. 110 N. W. 975.
The prohibition as to blacklisting applies to persons equally with companies and corporations, though the word is not used in that particular sentence. 88 N. W. 750.

Coercion of workmen.

SECTION 5140. Every person who, with intent to compel another to do or abstain from doing an act which such other person has a legal right to do, or abstain from doing, shall wrongfully and unlawfully—

1. Use violence or inflict injury upon such other person or his family, or a member thereof, or upon his property, or threaten such violence or injury;

2. Deprive any such person of any tool, implement, or clothing, or hinder him in the use thereof; or

3. Attempt to intimidate such person by threats or force—Shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(6) To commit any act injurious to the public health, to public morals, trade, or commerce, or for the perversion or obstruction of justice, or of the due administration of the laws; or

Such persons, and each of them, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars, or shall be imprisoned not less than one month nor more than six months, or both.

Obstructing operation, injuring property, etc., of railroads.

SECTION 1345. If two or more persons shall willfully and maliciously combine or conspire together to obstruct or impede, by any act, or by means of intimidation, the regular operation and conduct of the business of any railroad company, or to impede, hinder, or obstruct, except by due process of law, the regular running of any locomotive engine, freight or passenger train on any railroad, or the labor and business of such railroad company, such persons, and each of them, shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, or both; but this section shall not apply to persons who merely quit the employment of a railroad company, whether by concert of action or otherwise.

SEC. 3392. It is the duty of any person, after having discharged any employee from his service, upon demand by such discharged employee, to furnish him in writing a full, succinct and complete statement of the reason of his discharge, and if such person refuses so to do within a reasonable time after such demand, it is unlawful thereafter for such person to furnish any statement of the reason of such discharge to any person, or in any way to blacklist or to prevent such discharged person from procuring employment elsewhere, subject to the penalties and damages prescribed in this chapter.

SEC. 322. No conspiracies other than those enumerated in the preceding sections are punishable criminally.

SEC. 323. No agreement, except to commit a felony upon the person of another, or to commit arson or burglary, amounts to a conspiracy, unless some act, besides such agreement, be done to effect the object thereof, by one or more of the parties to the agreement.

SEC. 325. The provisions of this chapter do not apply to any arrangement, agreement or combination between laborers made with the object of lessening the number of hours of labor, or increasing wages, nor to persons engaged in horticulture or agriculture, with a view of enhancing the price of their products.

PART I—TITLE IX—CHAPTER XI.—Protection of discharged employees, blacklisting, etc.

ACTS OF 1903.

CHAPTER 80.—Employment of labor—Fraudulent representations, etc.

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, society, company, association, corporation, or organization of any kind, doing business in this State, to induce, influence, persuade or engage workmen to change from one place to another in this State, through or by means of deception, misrepresentation and false advertising concerning the kind or character of the work, or the sanitary or other conditions of employment, or as to the existence of a strike or other trouble pending between the employer and the employees, at the time of, or immediately prior to such engagement. Failure to state in any advertisement, proposal or contract for the employment of workmen that there is a strike, lockout, or other labor trouble at the place of the proposed employment, when in fact such strike, lockout or other trouble then actually exists at such place, shall be deemed a false advertisement and misrepresentation for the purpose of this act.

SEC. 2. Every person, company, corporation, society, association, or organization of any kind, doing business in this State, violating any of the provisions of this act, is punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred ($100) dollars, not [nor] more than two thousand ($2,000) dollars.

SEC. 3. CHAPTER 150.—Blacklisting.

SECTION 1. No corporation, company, organization, or individual shall blacklist or publish, or cause to be blacklisted or published, any employee, mechanic, or laborer discharged by such corporation, company, organization or individual with the intent and for the purpose of preventing such employee, mechanic, or laborer from engaging in or securing similar or other employment from any other corporation, company, organization, or individual.

SEC. 2. If any officer or agent of any corporation, company, organization, or individual, or other person, shall blacklist or publish or cause to be blacklisted or published any employee, mechanic or laborer discharged by such corporation, company, organization, or individual, with the intent and for the purpose of preventing such employee, mechanic or laborer from engaging in or securing similar or other employment from any other corporation, company, organization, or individual, or shall in any manner conspire or contrive by correspondence or otherwise, to prevent such discharged employee from procuring employment, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty, nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days, or both.

SEC. 3. But this act shall not be construed as prohibiting any corporation, company, organization or individual, from giving in writing, on application from such discharged employee, or any corporation, company, organization or individual who may desire to employ such discharged employee, a truthful statement of the reason for such discharge: Provided, That said written cause of discharge, when so made by such person, agent, company, organization or corporation shall not be used as the cause for an action for libel, either civil or criminal, against the person, agent, company, organization or corporation so furnishing the same.

NEW JERSEY.

GENERAL STATUTES OF 1895.

Labor combinations not unlawful.

SECTION 23. It shall not be unlawful for any two or more persons to unite, combine or bind themselves by oath, covenant, agreement, alliance or otherwise, to persuade, advise or encourage, by peaceable means, any person or persons to enter into any combination for or against leaving or entering into the employment of any person, persons or corporation.

Since this act, it is not unlawful for the members of an association to combine for the purpose of securing control of the work connected with their trade, and to endeavor to effect such purposes by peaceable means. 47 Eq. Rep. 519.

The purpose of this act was to legalize strikes. It would seem also to intend a legalization of a combination to induce others to join in a strike, but the methods must be persuasive and not coercive. 46 Atl. Rep. 208.

The statute affects the status of the acts described only as declaring them not to be criminal, but does not take away the right of any individual injured by them to bring suit to recover damages. 52 Atl. Rep. 152.

ACTS OF 1903.

CHAPTER 257.—Strikes of railroad employees.

SECTION 62. If any railroad employee on any railroad within this State engaged in any strike or with a view to incite others to such strike, or in furtherance of any combination or preconcert with any other person to bring about a strike, shall abandon the engine in his charge when attached to a train at any place other than the schedule or otherwise appointed destination of such train, or shall refuse or neglect to continue to discharge his duty, or to proceed with such train to the place of destination aforesaid; or if any railroad employee within this State, for the purpose of furthering the object of or lending aid to any strike organized or attempted to be maintained on any other railroad, either within or without the State, shall refuse or neglect in the course of his employment to aid in the movement over and upon the tracks of the company employing him of the cars of such other railroad company received therefrom in the course of transit, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and may also be imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 63. If any person in aid or furtherance of the objects of any strike upon any railroad, shall interfere with, molest or obstruct any locomotive engineer or other railroad employee engaged in the discharge or performance of his duty as such, or shall obstruct any railroad track within this State, or shall injure or destroy the rolling stock or other property of any railroad company, or shall take possession of or remove any such property, or shall prevent or attempt to prevent the use thereof by such company or its employees, or shall by offer of recompense induce any employee of any railroad company within this State to leave the service of such company while in transit, every such person offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and may also be imprisoned not more than one year, at he [the] discretion of the court.

NEW YORK.

REVISED STATUTES OF 1901.

Coercion of employees, etc.

A person who with a view to compel another person to do or to abstain from doing an act which such other person has a legal right to do or to abstain from doing, wrongfully and unlawfully:

1. Uses violence or inflicts injury upon such other person or his family, or a member thereof, or upon his property or threatens such violence or injury; or
 2. Deprives any such person of any tool, implement or clothing or hinders him in the use thereof; or
 3. Uses or attempts the intimidation of such person by threats or force,
- Is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Workmen may meet and discuss questions affecting their welfare and take such action as seems to them best so long as it does not involve or tend to create a breach of the peace. They may decline to work unless their terms are complied with and may accost others and seek to persuade them to join in such action. But if these rights are enforced in an illegal manner, either alone or in company with others, by the use of threats or violence the offender becomes liable to arrest to prevent a breach of the peace. 1 City Court Supp. 54.

(See also 4 N. Y. Cr. 317, cited below.)

Conspiracy against workmen.

(Page 655.)

SECTION 1. If two or more persons conspire, either

- * * * * *
5. To prevent another from exercising a lawful trade or calling, or doing any other lawful act, by force, threats, intimidation, or by interfering or threatening to interfere with tools, implements, or property belonging to or used by another, or with the use or employment thereof; or
- * * * * *

Each of them is guilty of a misdemeanor.

A union provided by its by-laws that a member working for less than the fixed rate of wages should forfeit a sum as penalty, to be recovered by process of law. Held, in an action to recover such penalty, (a) That the association was not unlawful within the meaning of this section. (b) That such a by-law was not unlawful as made in restraint of trade, (c) That a penalty could properly be attached and an action maintained for its recovery. (d) It is not unlawful for any number of persons to make mutual agreements as to wages, but any association or combination for the purpose of compelling journeymen or employers to conform to any rule or agreement fixing the rate of wages to which they were not parties, by the imposition of penalties, by agreeing to quit the service of any employer who employs journeymen below certain rates, unless the journeyman pays the penalty imposed by the combination, or by menaces, threats, intimidation, violence, or other unlawful means, is an indictable conspiracy. 2 Daly 1.

An indictment charging that certain parties conspired by force, threats, and intimidation to prevent a certain firm from exercising its lawful trade and calling; and by threats and threatening notices attempted to intimidate certain employees and to constrain them against their own free will to quit their employment; and that assaults on its employees were committed, the shop beset and breaches of the peace committed in attempts to intimidate persons who desired to trade in the shop and prevent them from doing so, was held to sufficiently charge conspiracy and coercion under the above section and subdivisions 1 and 3 of the law on coercion (see above). Counts charging conspiracy against employer and employees may be properly joined. 4 N. Y. Cr. 317.

Interference by outside parties with employment, the terms of which are satisfactory to the employees and attempts to enforce a boycott on an employer until he shall accede to the demands of such outside parties, are acts constituting offenses within this statute and at common law as well. Efforts by combinations of men to coerce workmen to join unions or to hinder them from obtaining work on account of not being members, or to interfere with the employers in the control of their lawful business by means of threats of injury or loss, or by interference with property are illegal. 30 Fed. Rep. 48.

An agreement between a labor organization and an employers' association not to employ any but members of said organization is, in effect, a threat to keep persons from working and to procure their discharge. Such a contract, or the rules of a labor organization are no defense in a suit for damages from loss of employment by conspiracy. 46 N. E. Rep. 297.

SEC. 3. * * * the orderly and peaceable assembling or cooperation of persons employed in any calling, trade, or handicraft, for the purpose of obtaining an advance in the rate of wages or compensation, or of maintaining such rate, is not a conspiracy.

Peaceable withdrawal from employment for the purpose of improving or maintaining wages is not an offense within the provisions of sections 1 and 3. Section 3 does not authorize a combination of individuals to compel, by means condemned in section 1, workmen to join the organization, or to punish those who may be inimical thereto. 5 N. Y. Cr. 509.

A combination by workmen to drive out and prevent from working in a certain district an objectionable person, is a criminal conspiracy. 6 N. Y. Cr. 292.

An injunction should not be granted against a confederation of persons whose object it is to entice employees from service in the absence of proof of intended violence, intimidation, etc. The remedy is an action for damages. 9 Abb. New Cases 393.

The fact that a contract between a labor organization and an employers' association had the proper object of avoiding disputes and conflicts does not legalize a plan compelling workmen not members of the union to join it on peril of discharge. 152 N. Y. 33.

An injunction will not lie against a body of workmen combined for the purpose of peaceably and without intimidation persuading their fellow-craftsmen to leave their employment in order to obtain an advance in wages, and they may lawfully pay the expenses of those who leave. 17 N. Y. Supp. 264.

A combination of manufacturers has the right to lock out all operatives connected with an association of employees because of demands which it considers unjust, made by such association upon a member of the combination of manufacturers, and the employees' association has an equal right to endeavor to persuade those who have been accustomed to deal with the manufacturers to discontinue their trade. 77 Hun 215.

Extortion.

SECTION 1. Extortion is the obtaining of property from another with his consent, induced by a wrongful use of force or fear, or under color of official right.

SEC. 2. Fear, such as will constitute extortion, may be induced by a threat:

1. To do an unlawful injury to the person or property of the individual threatened, or to any relative of his or to any member of his family;

* * * * *
Obtaining money from an employer under a threat to keep the members of a labor union from returning to their employment under him is not extortion under the above sections. 61 Hun 571.

Intimidation does not require overt acts of violence or direct threats by word of mouth. Persons engaged in a boycott may intimidate by their numbers, methods, devices, etc. If these deter customers from trading through a sense of danger if the appeals are ignored, there is intimidation. Obtaining money by threats or by the continuance of a boycott as described constitutes the crime of extortion under the above sections. Those present and abetting when the money is paid or uniting in the acts that lead to the payment or the agreement to pay, though not present when the money is received, are each liable as principals. Whether the money is shared personally or placed in a fund to pay the expenses of the boycott is of no consequence as affecting the crime. 4 N. Y. Cr. 403.

Defendant, the head of a labor organization, was properly charged with extortion when evidence showed that he had demanded and received money as the price of abandoning a boycott undertaken to coerce plaintiffs into obedience to his commands as to the number of apprentices they should employ. 137 N. Y. 29.

Breaking contract of service.

SECTION 10. If any officer or agent of any corporation, company or individual, or other person, shall blacklist or publish or cause to be blacklisted or published any employee, mechanic or laborer discharged by such corporation, company or individual, with the intent and for the purpose of preventing such employee, mechanic or laborer from engaging in or securing similar or other employment from any other corporation, company or individual, or shall in any manner conspire or contrive by correspondence or otherwise, to prevent such discharged employee from procuring employment, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days or both.

SEC. 3. But this act shall not be construed as prohibiting any corporation, company or individual, from giving in writing, on application from such discharged employee, or any corporation, company or individual who may desire to employ such discharged employee, a truthful statement of the reason for such discharge: Provided, That said written cause of discharge, when so made by such person, agent, company or corporation, shall never be used as the cause for an action for libel, either civil or criminal, against the person, agent [,] company or corporation so furnishing same.

SEC. 4. He is guilty of blacklisting who places, or causes to be placed, the name of any discharged employee, or any employee who has voluntarily left the service of any individual, firm, company, or corporation on any book or list, or publishes it in any newspaper, periodical[,] letter or circular, with the intent to prevent said employee from securing employment of any kind with any other person, firm, corporation or company, either in a public or private capacity.

CHAPTER 94.—Conspiracy—Boycotting.

SECTION 3. Either or any of the following acts shall constitute a conspiracy in restraint of trade:

1. Where any two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons who are engaged in buying or selling any article of merchandise, produce or any commodity, enter into an agreement or understanding to refuse to buy from or sell to any other person, firm, corporation, or association of persons any article of merchandise, produce or commodity.

2. Where any two or more persons, firms, corporations or associations of persons shall agree to boycott or threaten to refuse to buy from or sell to any person, firm, corporation or association of persons for buying from or selling to any other person, firm, corporation or association of persons.

SEC. 4. Any and all trusts * * * and conspiracies in restraint of trade as herein defined, are hereby prohibited and declared to be illegal.

SEC. 11. Each and every firm, person, corporation or association of persons who shall in any manner violate any of the provisions of this act shall for each and every day that such violation shall be committed or continued, forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars, which may be recovered in the name of the State of Texas in any county where the offense is committed or where either of the offenders reside, or in Travis County, and it shall be the duty of the attorney-general, or the district or county attorney under the direction of the attorney-general, to prosecute for the recovery of the same, and the fees of the prosecuting attorney for representing the State in proceedings under this act shall be over and above the fees allowed him under the general fee bill.

SEC. 12. Any contract or agreement in violation of the provisions of this act shall be absolutely void and not enforceable either in law or equity.

SEC. 13. And in addition to the penalties and forfeitures herein provided for, every person violating this act may further be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than ten years.

CHAPTER 220.—Intimidation of employees.

SECTION 5041. A person who threatens violence or injury to another person with intent to prevent his employment in a mill, manufactory, shop, quarry, mine, railroad or other occupation, shall be imprisoned not more than three months, or fined not more than one hundred dollars.

SEC. 5042. A count charged conspiracy to hinder and prevent by violence, threats, and intimidation the employment and retention by a company of certain employees; also conspiracy to terrify and drive away workmen by threats, with malicious intent to injure said company; also threats to publish the names of employees in the "scab" list of a trade journal, thus putting them in fear and driving them away. Held, that these counts sufficiently charged an offense under the above sections. 59 Vt. 273.

CHAPTER 23.—Blacklisting.

SECTION 1. Every person in this State who shall willfully and maliciously, send or deliver, or make or cause to be made, for the purpose of being delivered or sent or part with the possession of any paper, letter or writing, with or without name signed thereto, or signed with a fictitious name, or with any letter, mark or other designation, or publish or cause to be published any statement for the purpose of preventing any other person from obtaining employment in this State or elsewhere, and every person who shall willfully or maliciously "blacklist" or cause to be "blacklisted" any person or persons, by writing, printing or publishing, or causing the same to be done, the name, or mark, or designation representing the name of any person in any paper, pamphlet, circular or book, together with any statement concerning persons so named, or publish or cause to be published that any person is a member of any secret organization, for the purpose of preventing such person from securing employment, or who shall willfully and maliciously make or issue any statement or paper that will tend to influence or prejudice the mind of any employer against the person of such person seeking employment, or any person who shall do any of the things mentioned in this section for the purpose of causing the discharge of any person employed by any railroad or other company, corporation, individual or individuals, shall, on conviction thereof, be adjudged guilty of misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than ninety days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

ANNOTATED STATUTES OF 1898.

Injuring trade, intimidation, etc.

SECTION 4466a. Any two or more persons who shall combine, associate, agree, mutually undertake or concert together for the purpose of willfully or maliciously injuring another in his reputation, trade, business or profession by any means whatever, or for the purpose of maliciously compelling another to do or perform any act against his will, or preventing or hindering another from doing or performing any lawful act shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

SEC. 4466b. Any two or more persons, whether members of a partnership or company of stockholders in a corporation, who are employers of labor, who shall combine or agree to combine for the purpose of preventing any person seeking employment from obtaining the same, or for the purpose of procuring or causing the discharge of any employee by threats, promises circulating black lists or causing the same to be circulated, or who shall, after having discharged any employee, prevent or attempt to prevent such employee from obtaining employment with any other person, partnership, company or corporation by the means aforesaid, or shall authorize, permit or allow any of his or their agents to blacklist any discharged employee or any employee who has voluntarily left the service of his employer, or circulate a black list of such employee to prevent his obtaining employment under any other employer, or who shall coerce or compel any person to enter into an agreement not to unite with or become a member of any labor organization as a condition of his securing employment or continuing therein, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, which fine shall be paid into the State treasury for the benefit of the school fund. Nothing in this section shall prohibit any employer of labor from giving any other such employer, to whom a discharged employee has applied for employment, or to any bondsman or surety, a truthful statement of the reasons for such discharge, when requested so to do by such employee, the person to whom he has applied for employment, or any bondsman or surety; but it shall be a violation of this section to give such information with the intent to blacklist, hinder or prevent such employee from obtaining employment; neither shall anything herein contained prohibit any employer of labor from keeping for his own information and protection a record showing the habits, character and competency of his employees and the cause of the discharge or voluntary quitting of any of them.

Sec. 4466c. Any person who by threats, intimidation, force or coercion of any kind shall hinder or prevent any other person from engaging in or continuing in any lawful work or employment, either for himself or as a wageworker, or who shall attempt to so hinder or prevent shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

These sections are declaratory of the common law, and wholly condemn all conspiracies to injure or oppress, or to interfere with the rights of others. Their efficiency is in no degree impaired by any statutory recognition of the right of organization for the purpose of promoting the welfare of labor. 60 Fed. Rep. 803.

For the business agent of a labor organization to say to nonunion men employed on a building "You can not build this building. I will fight it if it takes all summer, and if your city will not protect us we will get the militia," constitutes an offense under this section. 76 N. W. Rep. 504.

Employing bodies of armed men.

SECTION 4575b. Any person who, for himself or as agent or officer of any firm, joint stock company or corporation, shall use or employ or aid or assist in employing any body of armed men to act as militiamen, policemen or peace officers for the protection of persons or property or for the suppression of strikes, whether such armed men be employees of detective agencies, so called, or otherwise, they not being authorized by the laws of this State to act in such capacity, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the State prison not less than one year nor more than three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

UNITED STATES.

COMPILED STATUTES OF 1901.

Obstructing the mail.

SECTION 3995. Any person who shall knowingly or willfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail, or any carriage, horse, driver, or carrier carrying the same, shall, for every such offense, be punishable by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars.

This section applies only to acts performed with the intention of obstructing, and not to acts in themselves lawful from which delay unavoidably follows. 7 Wall. 482.

This section applies to the unlawful stopping of a railway mail train, although those guilty are willing to permit the movement of the mail car detached from the passenger cars of the train. 13 Phil. Rep. 476.

Also to the stopping of a train by discharged railway laborers although their primary intention may not be to obstruct the mail but to obtain a return passage. 19 Fed. Rep. 42.

Where the transportation of mails and interstate commerce has long been interrupted by the refusal of the employees of the railway company to move trains carrying certain cars, it is the duty of the company to use every effort to move the mails and interstate commerce, without regard to the make-up of regular trains; and any failure to perform this duty is a violation of this statute. 62 Fed. Rep. 840.

If a mail train which carries a Pullman car as a part of its regular make-up is delayed because it carries such car, it is no defense that the parties so delaying it were willing that the mail should proceed if the Pullman car were left behind. It is not necessary that defendants should be shown to have had knowledge that the mails were on board a train which they have detained and disabled. They are chargeable with an intent to do whatever is the reasonable and natural consequence of their acts. 67 Fed. Rep. 698.

SECTION 1. Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 2. Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 3. Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce in any Territory of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or with foreign nations, or between the District of Columbia and any State or States or foreign nations, is hereby declared illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 4. The several circuit courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act; and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney-General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises.

SEC. 5. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any proceeding under section four of this act may be pending, that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned, whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not; and subpoenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

SEC. 6. Any property owned under any contract or by any combination, or pursuant to any conspiracy (and being the subject thereof) mentioned in section one of this act, and being in the course of transportation from one State to another, or to a foreign country, shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure, and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law.

SEC. 7. Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by this act, may sue therefor in any circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

SEC. 8. That the word "person," or "persons," wherever used in this act shall be deemed to include corporations and associations existing under or authorized by the laws of either the United States, the laws of any of the Territories, the laws of any State, or the laws of any foreign country.

This act applies to combinations of laborers as well as of capitalists. The fact that a combination of men is in its origin and general purposes innocent and lawful is no ground of defense when the combination is turned to the unlawful purpose of restraining interstate and foreign commerce. A combination to secure or compel the employment of none but union men becomes a combination in restraint of interstate commerce within the meaning of this act, when, in order to gain its ends, it seeks to enforce and does enforce, by violence and intimidation, a discontinuance of labor in all departments of business, including the transportation of goods from State to State, and to and from foreign nations. 54 Fed. Rep. 994.

A rule of a labor organization which forbids its members to handle the cars of a railroad against which the organization has a grievance until such grievance has been adjusted is violative of section 1 of this act as being in restraint of trade or commerce. 55 Fed. Rep. 149.

Under section 5, an injunction order may provide that it shall be in force on defendants not named in the bill, but who are within the terms of the order where it also provides that it is operative on all persons acting in concert with the designated defendants, though not named in the writ, after the commission of some act by them in furtherance of the conspiracy against which the order is directed, and service of the writ on them. 62 Fed. Rep. 801.

The provision for forfeiture in section 6 of this act does not imply that only cases in which property shall be found subject to forfeiture shall be deemed within the scope of the act. The power given to circuit courts "to prevent and restrain violations" of the act, is not an invasion of the right of trial by jury, as the jurisdiction so given by equity will be deemed to be limited to such cases only as are of equitable cognizance. 64 Fed. Rep. 724.

Interference with employment—Blacklisting.

SECTION 1. The provisions of this act shall apply to any common carrier or carriers and their officers, agents, and employees, except masters of vessels and seamen, as defined in section forty-six hundred and twelve, Revised Statutes of the United States, engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water, for a continuous carriage or shipment, from one State or Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, to any other State or Territory of the United States, or the District of Columbia, or from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, or from any place in the United States through a foreign country to any other place in the United States. The term "railroad" as used in this act shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad, and also all the road in use by any corporation operating a railroad, whether owned or operated under a contract, agreement, or lease; and the term "transportation" shall include all instrumentalities of shipment or carriage. The term "employees" as used in this act shall include all persons actually engaged in any capacity in train operation or train service of any description, and notwithstanding that the cars upon or in which they are employed may be held and operated by the carrier under lease or other contract: Provided, however, That this act shall not be held to apply to employees of street railroads and shall apply only to employees engaged in railroad train service. In every such case the carrier shall be responsible for the acts and defaults of such employees in the same manner and to the same extent as if said cars were owned by it and said employees directly employed by it, and any provisions to the contrary of any such lease or other contract shall be binding only as between the parties thereto and shall not affect the obligations of said carrier either to the public or to the private parties concerned.

SEC. 8. In every incorporation under the provisions of chapter five hundred and sixty-seven of the United States Statutes of eighteen hundred and eighty-five and eighteen hundred and eighty-six [relating to national trade unions] it must be provided in the articles of incorporation and in the constitution, rules, and by-laws that a member shall cease to be such by participating in or by instigating force or violence against persons or property during strikes, lockouts, or boycotts, or by seeking to prevent others from working through violence, threats, or intimidation. Members of such incorporation shall not be personally liable for the acts, debts, or obligations of the corporations, nor shall such corporations be liable for the acts of members or others in violation of law; and such corporations may appear by designated representatives before the board created by this act, or in any suits or proceedings for or against such corporations or their members in any of the Federal courts.

SEC. 10. Any employer subject to the provisions of this act and any officer, agent, or receiver of such employer who * * * shall, after having discharged an employee, attempt or conspire to prevent such employee from obtaining employment, or who shall, after the quitting of an employee, attempt or conspire to prevent such employee from obtaining employment, is hereby declared to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction in the district in which such offense was committed, shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars.

THE COMMON LAW.

STRIKES.

By the term "strike" is commonly understood a concerted and simultaneous quitting of work by employees to influence the action of the employer in respect of some disputed matter, usually affecting the conditions of employment. A lockout, on the other hand, is the simultaneous discharge of all or a group of employees, or a refusal of the employer to permit them to labor because of such dispute.

In some early cases it was held that any concerted agreement to raise wages amounted to a criminal conspiracy, for participation in which the parties might be indicted. (R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 628.)

As construed in this country at the present time the common law does not condemn the strike. "The right to strike for any cause or no cause is clearly and fully sustained by all authority. Even a conspiracy to strike, followed by legal damage, is not unlawful if formed to better labor conditions." (Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union No. 125, 150 Fed. 155.)

An agreement among strikers to take peaceable means to induce others to join the union and strike, or to remain away from the works of the employer until he yields to the demands of the strikers, is not a conspiracy; nor is the carrying out of such a purpose by peaceable persuasion and without violence or intimidation unlawful. (Karges Furniture Co. v. Amalgamated Woodworkers' Local Union, 165 Ind. 421; 75 N. E. 877; Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Ruef, 120 Fed. 102.)

PICKETING.

Peaceable picketing, or the placing of watchers about the works and on the approaches to them for the purpose of gaining information and of informing prospective employees as to existing conditions, or of persuading workmen willing to be approached to refrain from working, has been held to violate no tenet of the common law. (Fletcher Co. v. Int. Assn. of Machinists, 55 Atl. 1077; Pope Motor Car Co. v. Keegan, 150 Fed. 148; Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union, supra.) In the case last named, however, it was said that peaceful picketing, while theoretically possible and entirely lawful, "is very much of an illusion;" and all forms of picketing are discountenanced in some cases on the ground of its tendency to bring undue pressure to bear on third parties, thus producing a sort of coercion or intimidation. (Otis Steel Co. (Limited) v. Local Union of Iron Molders No. 218, 110 Fed. 698; Beck v. Teamsters' Union, 118 Mich. 497, 77 N. W. 13; Vegelahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 92, 44 N. E. 1077, etc.)

The idea at the bottom of all such measures is that of compelling the employer to treat with his former employees now on strike and reinstate them in their positions on the desired conditions. This implies a sort of surviving claim on the positions vacated, a view that is expressly or impliedly condemned in a number of cases. (Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Ruef, supra; N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R. Co. v. Wenger, 17 Weekly Law Bul. 306; People v. Wilzig, 4 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 403; Pope Motor Car Co. v. Keegan, supra; Crump v. Com., 84 Va. 927, 6 S. E. 620.) The places vacated are to be freely open to any one who may choose to accept them, and any interference by violence, intimidation, or threats with the constitutional right of another to labor when, where, and on what terms he pleases is illegal. (Ib.)

BOYCOTTS.

The boycott is frequently resorted to as a means of enforcing strike demands. It may be defined as a confederation of persons for the purpose of injuring the business of another by preventing third parties from having dealings with him through fear of incurring the displeasure and hostility of the confederates. The boycott is directed not only at the person against whom the strikers had a grievance in the first instance, but against all who patronize him, with the intention of coercing him at the peril of financial ruin and social ostracism to comply with the requirements of the strikers. (Purvis v. Local No. 500, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, 63 Atl. 585; Beck v. Teamsters' Union, 77 N. W. 13; Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881.) Its legality has been denied in strong terms by some courts. (Brace Bros. v. Evans, 3 Ry. & Corp. L. J. 561; Thomas v. Cin., N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., 62 Fed. 803; Casey v. Cin. Typ. Union, 45 Fed. 135.) In the last-named case it was said that "No case has been cited where, upon a proper showing of facts, an unsuccessful appeal has been made to a court of chancery to restrain a boycott;" and in a recent case the boycott is defined as "an illegal conspiracy in restraint of trade." (Walsh v. Assn. of Master Plumbers of St. Louis, 71 S. W. 455.) The restraint is illegal even though there be no threats or acts of violence and the withholding of trade be done only by members of an association, if there is actual coercion and intimidation, and even though such coercion is only the danger of incurring a fine imposed by a by-law of the association. (Martell v. White, 69 N. E. 1085.) In Longshore Printing Co. v. Howell (26 Ore. 527, 38 Pac. 547) and Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (54 Minn. 223, 55 N. W. 1119), however, the boycott in itself was not condemned as illegal.

BLACK LIST.

Closely allied to the boycott, and often used as a part of its machinery is the black list, which is a list of persons who are "marked out for special avoidance, antagonism, or enmity on the part of those who prepare the list." (Mattison v. L. S. and M. S. Ry. Co., 3 Ohio Dec. 526.) A more common term among labor organizations is that of "unfair list," which includes the names of persons and firms from whom trade and intercourse are to be withheld. In such cases the legality or illegality of the maintenance and distribution of the "unfair list" would follow the conclusions of the courts as to the boycott of which it was an incident. As to the use of the black list by employers to prevent workmen from obtaining employment at other establishments with which the former employer is in association of some sort, it may be noted that a number of States forbid such action by statute.

A mere exchange of information, leaving each employer free to act according to his own judgment in the case is not, in the absence of a statute, illegal. (Willis v. Muscogee Mfg. Co., 48 S. E. 177; Boyer v. Western Union Tel. Co., 124 Fed. 246; Wabash R. R. Co. v. Young, 69 N. E. 1003.) Perversion of facts would give a right of action, however, as would any wrongful and malicious interference by a third person with contract relations existing between others, causing a breach thereof. (Willis v. Muscogee Mfg. Co., supra; Joyce v. G. N. Ry. Co., 110 N. W. 975.) The question was raised by the court in the latter case, though not answered, whether at common law such wrongful interference for the purpose of preventing the formation of contracts was not equally actionable, and May v. Wood (172 Mass. 14, 51 N. E. 191), Graham v. Ry. Co. (47 La. Ann. 214, 16 South. 806), etc., were cited as favoring that view.

LOCKOUTS.

As to the lockout, but little need be said. The right of the employer to discharge any or all of his employees who have no contract with him, or to refuse to employ any person or class of persons, rests on exactly the same footing as does the right of such employees to leave him or to refuse to work for him; it may be done for any reason or no reason, and no redress at law or equity exists. (U. P. Ry. Co. v. Ruef, supra; State v. Kreutzberg, 90 N. W. 1098.) If a number of employers agree among themselves to refuse employment to designated persons or classes of persons, their action would be subject to review only to the extent indicated in the discussion of the black list, just above.

INJUNCTIONS.

Redress for injuries resulting from boycotting may be sought in an action for damages (Boutwell v. Marr, 42 Atl. 607; Martell v. White, supra); and money paid on demand of a labor organization to prevent a threatened strike is recoverable in an action on the case. (Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1; March v. Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Union No. 1, 63 Atl. 291.) But inasmuch as the participants in a strike are generally numerous and are often not able to meet a judgment for damages if it should be secured against them, whether as individuals or as a union, cases of damage suits are not numerous. More common are proceedings in equity to procure injunctions to restrain picketing, boycotting, the distribution of "unfair lists" and other forms of coercion, intimidation, or interference with employment or business.

A preliminary or interlocutory decree may be issued at the instance of one party, who must show not merely possible or probable danger of interference, but that the injury is either already occasioned and will continue unless enjoined, or that it is so imminent as to warrant the intervention of the court. Other facts to be shown are the irresponsibility, from a financial standpoint, of the parties against whom the injunction is sought; their numbers, making suits at law numerous and burdensome; and the preponderance of the threatened loss of the complainant over the inconvenience to the respondents which would follow the issue of the writ; though not all of these would be required in a single instance. (My Maryland Lodge, No. 186, Int. Ass'n of Machinists v. Adt, 59 Atl. 721; Sherry v. Perkins, 147 Mass. 212, 17 N. E. 307; Coeur d'Alene Consol. and Min. Co. v. Miners' Union, 51 Fed. 260; In re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 15 Sup. Ct. 900; Dudley v. Hurst, 67 Md. 44, 8 Atl. 901; Brace Bros. v. Evans, supra, etc.)

The only force of an injunction is to maintain present conditions, and it has no power to procure the restoration of conditions already changed. Hence no injunction will issue relating exclusively to acts already committed. Neither will they issue to restrain the commission of criminal acts, unless such acts involve injuries to property or property rights for which the law does not afford redress. Where such injuries are threatened, however, an injunction will issue, even though the prohibited acts would be punishable as criminal. (Sherry v. Perkins, supra.)

In its use in labor disputes the injunction is in general restrictive or prohibitory rather than mandatory. Thus while a railroad company may be ordered by a mandatory injunction to afford equal facilities for all freight offered it, its employees can not, by a similar injunction, be compelled to remain in its service. (Toledo, A. A. & N. M. Ry. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., 54 Fed. 730.) Though if a workman remains with a railroad under the circumstances indicated, he will be liable for contempt if he refuses personally, after notice had, to carry out the provisions of the injunction. (In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 17 Sup. Ct. 658.)

Where there is no adequate proof of intimidation or impending danger no writ will be granted, nor will mere persuasion and the offer of transportation from the locality where the strike is in progress, or the payment of strike benefits to those who will abandon their employment and join the union, call for the issue of an injunction, provided no coercion or intimidation is attempted. (Johnston Harvester Co. v. Meinhardt, 60 How. Pr. 168; Everett Waddy Co. v. Richmond Typ. Union No. 90, 53 S. E. 273; Rogers v. Evarts, 17 N. Y. Supp. 264.) Actual violence is not necessary, however, to ground a successful complaint. The numbers of the striking employees, their positions, attitudes, looks, ridicule, threats, etc., may produce intimidation and coercion, against which an injunction will issue. (Barr v. Essex Trades Council, supra; Jordahl v. Hayda, 82 Pac. 1079.) Free use of streets, free access to works, and freedom from insulting or otherwise objectionable treatment, both at home and in public places, are among the rights of every citizen; and an employer's interest in such rights for his employees is sufficient to support a complaint from him and the securing of an injunction on a proper showing of facts. (American Steel and Wire Co. v. Wire Drawers', etc., Union, 90 Fed. 608; In re Debs, supra; Jersey City Printing Co. v. Cassidy, 53 Atl. 230.) In general it may be said that what acts will warrant the interference of a court of equity will be determined by the attendant circumstances of each case rather than by any general rule; and in deciding the matter, the courts will consider the spirit and intent, and not merely the form and letter of the act or word. (Coeur d'Alene, etc., Co. v. Miners' Union, supra.)

Labor organizations may be named as parties to proceedings for an injunction, whether incorporated or not. (Loewe v. California St. Fed. of Labor, 139 Fed. 71; Purvis v. Local, No. 500, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, supra; American Steel and Wire Co. v. Wire Drawers', etc., Union, supra.) They may also be assessed for damages resulting from acts of members done under the directions or by the approval and consent of the union (Purvis v. Local, etc., supra; Parker v. Bricklayers' Union, 21 O. L. B. 223; Patch Mfg. Co. v. Protection Lodge, No. 215, Int. Ass'n of Machinists, 60 Atl. 74), and may be fined for contempt of court, where injunctions prohibiting certain acts have been violated. (Chicago Typ. v. Franklin Union, No. 4, 36 Legal News 18; Franklin Union No. 4 v. People, 77 N. E. 176.) A late case holds, however, that, in the absence of statute, neither fines nor damages can be assessed against an unincorporated labor organization, though it may be properly named in an injunction. (Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union No. 125, supra.)

As to the binding effect of an injunction upon individual strikers and their liability both for damages and in contempt proceedings there is no dispute. Nor is it necessary to name as respondents all persons who may be subsequently held to be in contempt for a violation of the provisions of a decree, since all persons who have notice of its being issued and of its contents will be held to be bound by it. (In re Lennon, supra.)

The above is a statement in brief of what may be considered the principal points of the common law applicable to strikes and their related labor difficulties. Not all of these can be looked upon as definitely settled, since diverse rulings are to be found on some of the points discussed, and the courts differ considerably in the application of these rather general principles to individual cases; but this summary is believed to be in accord with the general trend of the decisions of the State and Federal courts.
